Carmel eager to give Clint a hero's welcome after his triumph at Oscars

By JOHN DETRO

IT WAS, yes, a pretty good story. An estimated one billion viewers worldwide heard the TV show's host banter about Carmel.

"Fantastic," Toni Jepson of Carmel Business Association commented on Tuesday afternoon. "It's good for the local economy. Let's hope that some of those people visit us. I think we should give him a parade down Ocean Avenue. He has done so much for this city."

She had in mind Clint Eastwood, former mayor whose decades-long career in films hit a peak Monday night when his moody Western — Unforgiven — won highest possible honors at the 65th annual Academy Awards at Dorothy Chandler Pavilion in Los Angeles.

CLINT IN 'UNFORGIVEN'

It was named best picture of 1992. Clint took home the best director's statuette. Gene Hackman from that cast nailed best supporting actor. And the same crew's Joel Cox scored for his editing.

Never before had Eastwood claimed a personal Oscar. He also was nominated as best actor, the prize which Al Pacino pocketed for Scent of a Woman.

So ended Clint's long run with the Westerns which brought him fame. During a pre-Oscar interview over cable television, he said he held the Unforgiven script eight years "as my final step in the genre."

Locals included

Academy Awards spokespersons guessed the global audience's size. Those billion or so viewers in 98 countries included local gatherings where well-wishers watched the live telecast and rooted for Clint.

Early on, Oscar host Billy Crystal introduced the seated Eastwood and mentioned Unforgiven anti-hero William Munny. "Clint used the same ruthless

Facilities task force charts future course

By SCOTT BREARTON

THE CARMEL Unified School District's newly-formed School Facilities Task Force held the first of several public meetings March 29, with the hope of developing a long-range strategic plan for rehabilitating and refurbishing the district's seven schools.

In outlining the specific goals of the task force at the beginning of the well-attended meeting held Monday night at Carmel Middle School, CUSD Superintendent Vance Baldwin said the district's most pressing need is to provide adequate and appropriate facilities for existing enrollment, while also taking future growth into account.

Baldwin said one of his dreams was "that someday we will be as proud of our school facilities as we are of our teachers and students. I'm tired of the Band-Aid approach we've been using."

"This is the the beginning of a really major stride in long-range planning for the district," said CUSD Board President Frank Pinney. "We have an aging physical plant that is being pushed by the needs of teachers and students."

Citing the tremendous pool of human resources that the task force can draw from, Pinney added, "I see us really embarking on an exciting possibility. I think this (the committee's organization) will become a model for other areas of planning for the district."

Because of the committee's size (62), participants will form smaller groups to examine specific issues, before reporting back to the committee for discussion and their recommendations.

Contrasting pictures painted of sprawling development

Rancho San Carlos plan given OK

By PAUL WOLF

MONTEREY COUNTY supervisors set the parameters for sprawling Rancho San Carlos after a five-hour public hearing that painted contrasting pictures of the contemplated development.

By a 3-2 vote, a land use plan was approved by the board of supervisors, which met in Salinas Tuesday, March 30.

First, there were those who supported a land use designation of one home per 40 acres on the 19,927-acre undeveloped spread, located south of Carmel Valley.

The people in this first camp perceived the designation as an ideal scheme that managed to ensure a generous 90 percent of the ranch as permanent open space. They proclaimed the land use formula as "a model for projects in the 21st century," serving the interests of both the environment and private property.

"This is a proposal that is not likely to come along in the next decade or even century, and we'd be foolish not to accept it," Hal Culp, who owns property next to Rancho San Carlos, told the board.

In its action, the board upheld a Monterey County Planning Commission decision, as well as a county staff recommendation.

Voting against the plan were 4th and 5th District supervisors Sam Karas and Karin Strasser Kauffman, who echoed many residents' concerns about water availability, worsening traffic and impacts to narrow roads like Robinson Canyon.

Rancho San Carlos abuts the southern edge of Carmel Valley and is roughly comparable to the valley in size.

Sizing it up

Tom Gray, managing partner of Rancho San Carlos, made sure to underscore what he believes is the reasonable scale of the proposed development, with its 350 homes, a 150-unit hotel and single golf course contemplated.

"Carmel Valley has 6,000 units and it's considered rural." Grav said. "Could you imagine if Rancho San Carlos has only 350 homes which were only built on the least sensitive part of the land?"

Analysis:

Strasser Kauffman, Karas' passionate pleas to no avail

By SUSAN BECK

IT IS notable that the two Monterey Peninsula representatives on the Monterey County Board of Supervisors were overruled on the Rancho San Carlos land use designation at its Tuesday, March 30, meeting.

Consideration for the decisions of supervisors representing the concerns of the people in their own backyard traditionally has been reflected in the deciding vote.

However, Tuesday's decision for a 1-40 land-use designation for Rancho San Carlos ignored the adamant arguments presented by Karin Strasser Kauffman and Sam Karas.

The overruling of those historically environmental votes — in view of the county's recent redistricting, which reduces the peninsula's vote to one — has triggered an alarm.

Strasser Kauffman, who is stepping down as 5th district supervisor, got to the heart of the matter, at least for those residents who are opposed to higher density designations for the peninsula, especially Carmel Valley.

"I'm concerned that the voice of the residents of the Monterey Peninsula were overruled," said Strasser Kauffman. Developments need to meet the needs of the community, she added, and the residents are going to have to work additionally hard to share equitably the limited amount of resources. "First, those re-

Congressional race offers refreshing field

PERHAPS IT was the crackerjack Clinton-Gore campaign which caught the collective eye of the nation when it blossomed in earnest last summer. Or, maybe, it was Ross Perot's folksy appeal to a segment of the American population that had become disenchanted and disillusioned with politics in general, to say nothing of politicians in particular.

Whatever the reasons, it is apparently vogue again for citizens to plunge into local politics. One needn't look any further for confirmation of that fact than the 26 well-intentioned individuals who are seeking to supplant Leon Panetta as caretaker of the 17th congressional district. Who would have ever guessed so many would deem this an attractive assignment?

Surely, those candidates who are fresh faces on the local political circuit have had little choice but to hurriedly try to inform the voters on their positions on the issues of most significance. Others — those veterans to the political wars — have been afforded the luxury of running on their records.

The recently completed national campaign showed a voter preference for women and political neophytes. The congressional race has picked up where the November elections left off with a healthy dose of variety to give even the most persnickety voter a clear choice in the Tuesday, April 13 special primary election.

Consider the slate of candidates:

- it includes 11 Democrats, 10 Republicans, three Independents, one Libertarian and one member of the Green Party;
- four are women vying for a post that for nearly three decades was the domain of Panetta and Burt Talcott.
- the official occupations as listed on the sample ballot run the gamut from the norm (supervisor, assemblyman, businessman) to the unique (artist, miller and solar technician).

More than anything, this congressional race is a throwback to the times when politics invited many to participate in the dance, not to sit by and watch. In more recent times, skeptical citizens have been more inclined to throw stones at the candidates than throw their names in as candidates.

Whether the impetus was Bill Clinton, Ross Perot or, even Leon Panetta, one thing is clear: the field of 17th District congressional candidates provides Monterey County voters with clear-cut choices. We can't ask for anything more than that.

Letters to the Editor

Letters to the editor are welcome. Views on all matters are acceptable, following the guidelines of good taste. Letters must not exceed 250 words in length. Letters are subject to editing for style and length. Each letter must contain name, address, telephone number and signature, and preferably be typed and double spaced. Anonymous letters, or those with no phone numbers will not be accepted.

A misplaced viewpoint

Dear Editor:

With all due respect to DJ Borek (Pine Cone, March 25), I must comment on her letter about Hatton Canyon and the letters written by the students of Carmel Middle School.

The wetlands of Hatton Canyon are not a matter of conjecture as opponents of the freeway have attempted to portray them. They are a matter of scientific fact. Matthew (Borek) was not misled by his teacher.

These wetlands are unique marshy wetlands characterized by mature willows, cottonwoods, creek dogwoods, wild currants, watercress, horsetail ferns, giant nettles, bullrushes and a number of other aquatic and riparian plant species which only grow in wetlands and riparian areas, and by certain bird species only found in such habitats. These particular wetlands are fed by a system of several springs from a series of smaller canyons which are a part of the Hatton Canyon ecosystem. The Canyon is a major watershed and has the only year round running water even in drought years in our area.

I suggest that Mrs. Borek take a walk in the canyon to see for herself. At this time, there are multitudes of nesting birds to be heard. The air is full of their songs and the sound of water. This place is a special and beautiful oasis for wildlife and for people alike. Having destroyed all other such places, this one becomes all the more precious. It is irreplaceable.

The students of Carmel Middle School and Carmel High School have no trouble valuing such a place. Their letters and activities are a reflection of the fact that their hearts and their heads are not disconnected. They are in touch with some basic values that many adults seem to have misplaced. They are an inspiration and should make us all proud.

Rubber boots a good idea

Dear Editor:

I read with perplexed interest the letter from the woman who was concerned that her son was not getting the full story from his teachers on the Hatton Canyon controversy. Apparently the child's teachers had brainwashed him into thinking that there were wetlands in Hatton Canyon and that the canyon was worth preserving.

As an educator and a resident of the splendid Hatton Canyon rim, I wondered why I had never brought up this issue with my students. It occurred to me that it is quite a politically charged subject, one that a tactful sort as myself might avoid. I'm glad that some teachers have had the courage to shun the political repercussions in order to explore a local issue that exemplifies the hard but crucial choices to be faced by the next generation.

When you explain to children that they might have to sacrifice some travel time in order to save 10,000 trees, several acres of the kind of wet places that nurture wildlife including deer, raccoons, squirrels, rabbits, bobcats, various amphibians, numerous resident and migrant bird species, etc., they easily grasp their responsibility.

This is in part due to teachers who have helped children to understand that humans are part of a global, interdependent ecosystem. An ecosystem that is showing many symptoms of severe stress, causing many parents, myself included, to be concerned for more than just the economic future of their children.

Kids can see the logic in protecting the less that 5% of wetlands remaining in California. Some adults just don't seem to get it. As a science teacher, I encourage students to find out things for themselves.

If Mrs. Concerned thinks it biasing to inform students that there are wetlands in Hatton Canyon, I would invite her to go look for herself. However, I do suggest that she wear rubber boots.

Playing political games

Dear Editor:

I may have voted for Barbara Brooks once but I will never make that mistake again.

I was shocked to read the false and misleading statements Mrs. Brooks made in a recent interview in the Carmel Residents Association newsletter and in the ballot argument against Measure H, printed in last week's Pine Cone.

I don't believe I'm alone in feeling that it is inappropriate behavior for council members to flat-out fabricate to their constituency and play political games on issues that affect every resident. These are serious times for Carmel-by-the-Sea, and we deserve fair, responsible government from our elected officials.

Rumor has it that Mrs. Brooks wants to run for mayor in 1994. I wonder what side of her mouth she'll be talking out of then?

Farr, Mello lend support for freeway alternatives

Caltrans drawings due to TAMC within month

By PAUL WOLF

IN THE wake of the Transportation Agency for Monterey County's decision to study alternatives to the Hatton Canyon freeway, it appears TAMC has secured the cooperation of Caltrans and legislators Sam Farr and Henry Mello.

As a good omen in the search for alternatives, Assemblyman Farr says he has received the assurance of the State Department of Transportation that it will present schematic drawings for one popular alternative — the so-called "4-modified," the widening of Highway 1 at Carmel Hill to four lanes, and creating an interchange at Carmel Valley Road.

Farr met with James van Loben Sels, director of Caltrans at the Sacramento office, who promised to have drawings available to TAMC members "within 30 days."

The assemblyman met with van Loben Sels on March 19, five days before TAMC's Wednesday meeting. So, in effect, Farr was a step ahead of the agency, which incorporated into its action the commitment to seek the help of Farr, State Sen. Henry Mello and Caltrans.

TAMC, in its 14-2 vote on March 24, also agreed to keep the Hatton Canyon project as its top priority on the state's transportation improvement program. Doing so, many members believed, would be a means of ensuring the $42 million earmarked for Highway 1 improvements would not be jeopardized.

But the canyon freeway project, known as alternative "1C modified," is looking less and less like a viable option to TAMC and other officials.

Farr, although side-stepping a clear position on Hatton Canyon, has been concerned about the environmental impacts of the Hatton Canyon route. The assemblyman believes the alternative favored by freeway opponents — 4 modified — should now be subject to the same scrutiny.

"It has always been my intention that the community be informed, in the greatest detail possible, of all the options available to them concerning this project," said Farr, who is currently campaigning for the 17th congressional seat.

Caltrans officials continue to be convinced 1C modified is the only viable long-term traffic solution; others would only offer short-term benefit, they contend.

CUSD adopts new calendar with year to begin in August

By SCOTT BREARTON

WHILE STUDENTS in the Carmel Unified School District will have their summer vacation slashed by two weeks next school year, they will enjoy a week off in October 1993 and a "Presidents' Week" recess in February 1994.

August 24 will mark the first day of school, and June 16 will be the last.

CUSD board members approved the new calendar at a board meeting held March 25 at Captain Cooper Elementary School in Big Sur, following a lengthy discussion of the new schedule's pros and cons.

"We're not taking off more time than we have in the past," said CUSD Assistant Superintendent Rosemary Montgomery. "It's just being rearranged. We still have the same number of school days and minutes in the classroom."

Among the arguments against the new calendar:

• Working parents would be faced with having to provide alternative activities or child care for their children during the new breaks, set for Oct. 25-29 and Feb. 14-21, 1994.

• The shortened summer vacation would make it more difficult for students to obtain summer work, as employers would be reluctant to hire someone for such a short period of time.

• Some teachers complained there isn't enough time during the existing school year to teach all the necessary programs, and the new breaks would serve to exacerbate the situation. A suggestion arose to use the time for special projects, an "intersession" or a latchkey program for younger children.

• Carmel High School ASB President Lance Thompson said the October break would make it difficult for football players. Thompson argued that while players would still have to attend daily practices and games, their fellow students would probably not be on campus and less likely to attend the games.

Successful case study

Montgomery cited Carmel Valley High's alternative calendar, which has been in use for "a couple years," as a successful case study. She said both students and teachers felt it was an advantage to return fresh after a break following each quarter.

"Another pro is that, at the elementary level particularly, students tend to forget a lot of what they learned over the summer break," Montgomery said, "so a great deal of time is spent on review."

Montgomery said that while parental response to the new calendar ranged from support to indifference, many said they would prefer a year-round system, an alternative the district has not ruled out.

There is some research to support the notion that achievement increases under the year-round school system, according to Montgomery.

The revised calendar was slated for approval at a district meeting March 11, but the board agreed to postpone a decision for two weeks, pending additional community input.

Locally, the traditional school calendar dates back more than 100 years, according to Montgomery, when the agriculture-based economy meant students needed the summer months off to work in the fields.

In an informal survey distributed to CUSD employees, Montgomery said 64 percent of respondents said they would favor the revised calendar to the existing one.

"Any change is hard, and this is a small change that's taken quite a while to get here," said Montgomery. "A school calendar is really an annual event. We'll give it a try this year and if it doesn't work out, then we'll try something different next year."

In other matters, the board heard from CUSD Superintendent Vance Baldwin, who reported he had received several phone calls from parents "regarding student participation in the Hatton Canyon debate."

"We would encourage students to get involved in the governmental process," Baldwin said, adding that students who attended the recent Transportation Agency for Monterey County meeting March 24 did so on their own behalf.

Responding to criticism from some parents that district teachers had influenced students to take a particular stance on the issue, Baldwin said: "Our teachers try to be as objective as possible."

Captain Cooper Elementary School Principal Paul Behan and staff gave an update on activities at the Big Sur facility. Behan showed a video illustrating the school's peer tutoring program, in which fourth and fifth-graders serve as role mod-

Supervisorial race greets two new faces

■ Mapstead makes late decision to enter

By PAUL WOLF

THOSE WHO have seen Carmel's Noel Mapstead in action at countless public hearings know he is serious when he calls himself "an advocate of the democratic process."

NOEL MAPSTEAD

Now, in the spirit of that process, Mapstead is seeking election to the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

The environmental activist's latest ambitions accompanied an important conclusion: Public hearings and letters to the editor do not provide much of a forum.

And Mapstead is eager for one.

"I want to reward myself and others for the hard work we've done over the years," he said, referring in particular to the united front against the controversial Hatton Canyon freeway.

"I would like to be part of a forum of debate on important issues in a less frustrating arena," Mapstead said. "We in the public are limited in the way we take part in the decision-making process. When you see that red light, your three minutes are up."

No doubt, activists like Mapstead, a 42-year-old artist, can be credited — or blamed, depending on where you stand — for some of the obstacles now before the 2.8-mile freeway proposal.

■ Farina says environment is key

By PAUL WOLF

TO FRAN FARINA, the 5th District is an environmental treasure that deserves an environmentalist as its supervisor.

Farina, 47, a Carmel resident and director on the Monterey Peninsula Water Management board, declares she fits the bill.

"Acre for acre, the district includes some of the most environmentally sensitive land in all of Monterey County," Farina told a group of supporters and news media at a Carmel press conference Friday, March 26, staged to kick off her campaign.

"Because it has such natural beauty, it is also subject to intense development pressure," added Farina, who is an attorney currently not practicing.

To illustrate her commitment to environmental issues, the candidate announced environmentalist Margaret Owings would serve as her honorary campaign chair.

Farewell to Karin

Farina had been working on Karin Strasser Kauffman's re-election campaign when the incumbent announced she would not seek another term. Farina had been prepared to step in; however, she explains, "It is up to the people to decide who is Karin's successor."

Nevertheless, Farina was quick to say she possesses many of Strasser Kauffman's qualities. "We are both thoroughly prepared, attentive to details and we try to listen to both sides."

Assessing Strasser Kauffman's nine years of service, Farina said, "I believe she's done a superb job."

Under the redistricting plan approved earlier this year, the 5th District now encompasses Carmel, virtually all of tactics when he cleaned up Carmel," Crystal quipped.

"There was Dodge, Tombstone and Carmel."

Jepson chuckled at the memory. "Every time something like that happens, people are reminded that we're here. I think it's just great."

Crystal plopped into Clint's lap while Billy sang the opening medley — based on the titles of best picture nominees. Since the evening was dedicated to the film industry's women, it was fitting that actress Frances Fisher (Eastwood's ladylove) sat beside Clint all evening long and squeezed his arm when Carmel's most famous resident appeared a bit nervous.

Throughout the film awards season, Eastwood had been a man of few words. His acceptance speeches were among Monday night's shortest and most thoughtful.

After the best director announcement: "This is all right. I've been around 39 years and I've been very lucky...The trouble with living this long, I know so many people that I can't remember all the names."

He thanked critics "for discovering this film" and the French and British "who appreciated my work before (such) was fashionable." He thanked Miss Fisher and all the women "who played the prostitutes (in Unforgiven) and made the whole thing go."

Following the best picture announcement: "This is just wonderful. It goes to everyone I can think of. In this Year of the Woman, the greatest women on the planet is here tonight — my mother, Ruth."

Long associated with Warner Brothers, Eastwood dedicated the latter award to Steve Ross. Ross was chief CEO at Time Warner when he died late last year.

Filmland reporters had dubbed Eastwood the "Oscar favorite" many days ago. One reason: the Directors Guild of America picked him as 1992's best. Over eight of the last 11 years, the DGA victor went on to claim the best picture.

The Pine Cone predicted correctly that Clint would win director's honors. Irish director Neil Jordan's The Crying Game was seen as the only threat to Unforgiven in the best picture category. Jordan did win best original screenplay.

What next for the 62-year-old Eastwood? As reported earlier, the National Association of Theater Owners convention gave an enthusiastic reception to the trailer for his next film — the Secret Service story In the Line of Fire. And filmland insiders say he soon may direct Kevin Costner.

Right now, nothing succeeds like success. By Tuesday morning, film commentators were taking fresh looks at the Eastwood career.

One wrote that Play Misty For Me — his first directorial effort, shot in Carmel 22 years ago — was an "obvious precursor" to Fatal Attraction (1987).

ther should anyone else. The Planning Commission and City Council would stop it, even if some foolhardy soul applied.

But if they're so worried about liquor close to residences, somebody needs to tell them it's already there. Two pillars of resident-oriented business, Surf n' Sand and Carmel Village Market, are dispensing Johnny Walker bold as brass just a stone's throw from neighboring homes. And rumor has it that locals account for much of their alcoholic beverage trade.

Now it's just not going to happen that a liquor store as such will be permitted In the RC zone within 100 feet of a home. For responsible public officials to raise this smoke screen as a ballot argument is part and parcel of deceptive tactics to undermine a long-studied and much-needed improvement in our zoning system.

Reasonable compromise

Dear Editor:

Carmel's zoning ordinance (92-23) will appear as a referendum (Measure H) on the June ballot. The city council approved the ordinance by a 4 to 1 majority after years of public hearings. It deserves voter support.

First, it is a reasonable compromise. It allows a few more property owners to rent their properties in a more open market, but with appropriate caps in the ordinance on certain types of businesses, i.e., T-shirt shops, etc.

Second, there is no evidence that Carmel residents even want the so-called Service Commercial zone. But if we do, someone will have to pay the difference between what a resident serving business can pay for rental property and what the open market would bring. As it stands now, a few property owners who are fortunate — or perhaps unfortunate to own the property — are singled out to bear the burden through reduced rentals on their property. Shouldn't all residents pay to subsidize these businesses if they are truly resident serving?

Third, we need to establish better rapport with property owners and local business. Our major sources of revenue are the transient occupancy and sales taxes. We should support these revenue sources, not degrade them. They provide many services, i.e., excellent police department, Sunset Center, public works, recreation, city staff, etc. Many communities are not so well blessed.

Measure H and the majority city council deserve our support by voting yes and retaining zoning ordinance 92-23. It is a small — but important — step where we begin to treat all our members (resident and business people) as one community. It is not opposing factions engaged only in self interest activities as is often implied.

A vote for Honneger

Dear Editor:

There are many reasons to vote for Barbara Honneger for the congressional seat left vacant by Leon Panetta. Here are just a few. Barbara Honneger:

- is the only Republican woman running. The men haven't done so well — let's elect a woman!
- has never been a lobbyist for a foreign country!
- is not a lawyer! There are too many lawyers in Congress already!
- doesn't need a lawyers' jargon — what she says comes from the heart and her conscience.
- is a woman of great courage and has put her life on the line more than once in exposing corruption in government.
- is the only candidate with national experience.
- instituted a class action suit against Les Aspin, secretary of defense, and the Base Closure and Realignment Commission, on behalf of the people, because the 17th district is not now represented in the House of Representatives.
- is pro-choice and pro-ERA.
- would submit a bill to have Salinas Valley declared a natural economic emergency due to saltwater intrusion, triggering federal funding.
- fully supports Panetta's bill mandating a university at Fort Ord, and opposes a prison on any part of the property; and
- favors a "Single Payer" national health plan like the Canadian plan, with some changes and improvements.

I urge all Democrats (of which I am one) and Republicans to vote for Barbara Honneger, No. 21, on the ballot April 13.

Carmel women spearhead all-night sober grad party

By SCOTT BREARTON

TWO CARMEL women are organizing what they hope will be the first all-night sober graduation party ever held at Carmel High School.

Its purpose, according to parent co-chairs Linda Russell and Patty Wilson, is to provide a "safe, sane and sober haven" following graduation, and to begin a new tradition of all-night, drug-free graduation parties.

"There is an option to partying with drugs and alcohol," Russell said. "We want to show them (graduates) that they can enjoy their lives without the use of drugs."

The CHS gym and surrounding area will be completely transformed in the week prior to graduation night June 11. While the party's theme is a surprise, its organizers promise an unforgettable night for those who attend.

An "open house" will be held at the gymnasium on graduation day, during which members of the bus ess community, city council and school district can get a walk-through tour of the party area. Russell hopes the open house will be an opportunity to bring together these three community entities in a common worthy cause.

"We want to show them (1993 graduates) how much we and the community care," Russell said, "and that they can 'get high' on the fun. These kids are the people who will support us as we age."

Last year, more than 100 CHS graduates attended "Casino Night," a sober graduation party held at the Carmel Youth Center. But Russell said because the event ended at 2 a.m., many students still had energy to burn and wound up going to other parties, perhaps not as drug-free as the one they left.

Graduation night is the most dangerous moment in a child's life up to that point, according to Wilson, because they are no longer children but not yet ready to be adults. She said one percent of high school seniors nationwide have had their lives permanently altered by drug and alcohol-related accidents on graduation night.

Monterey High School's first annual all-night sober graduation party last year was a tremendous success, thanks largely to the efforts of chairwoman Cathe Martorella.

'We want to show them how much we and the community care, and that they can 'get high' on the fun. These kids are the people who will support us as we age.'
— Linda Russell

Nine Monterey County high schools participated in the county-wide effort last year, according to Martorella. This year, CHS will join North Monterey County High School as the two newest county high schools to hold all-night sober graduation parties, bringing the county total to 11. Last year, Pacific Grove, King City and Monterey High schools joined the ranks of believers.

Telling statistics

"Overall, the number of traffic fatalities caused by teen DUI has just dropped phenomenally in the last four years," said Karen Jeffries, who works for Monterey County Health Department's division of alcohol and drug programs. "It went from 22 in 1989 to seven in 1990, one in 1991, and none in 1992."

Jeffries said the county has been involved in all-night sober graduation parties since 1990. Jeffries works directly with parent committees, serving as a consultant and researcher, providing a vital communication link between parents and parent committees.

"Parents and members of the community are really making it happen," said Jeffries. "This is the best graduation gift they can give their child."

Carmel Grad Night 1993 will kick off at 9 p.m. with dancing, food, beverages, casino games and many other activities. At 11 p.m. the doors will close, after which no one will be admitted.

At 12:30 a.m. a disc jockey will begin spinning records. At 3:15 a.m., a female hypnotist will give a two-hour show in which graduates will participate. Her show will conclude just in time for breakfast and a grand prize raffle drawing.

About 20 parents are currently on the CHS Grad Night Core Committee, but their work has just begun. Organizers hope to raise $10,000 in the next two months to help pay for the party. They have taken in $2,390 so far, thanks largely to a $2,000 donation from the Yellow Brick Road, a thrift shop run by Carmel Presbyterian Church, the first major underwriter of the event.

Persons interested in volunteering their time or contributing money for the party may call Wilson at 626-8023.

Carmel Commentary

A call for unity in Carmel

By Neil Owen Kruse

WE DO seem to do a lot of fighting amongst ourselves here in peaceful Carmel-by-the-Sea. People only fight over something they care deeply about. Yet, as in any good marriage, the fighting and disagreement is fruitful only if in we learn in the end to appreciate and understand each other better as a result.

I still feel too few are still speaking for too many. To make matters worse, it always seems one side accuses the other of having horns sprouting from their forehead and the motives of thieves and devil worshipers.

Do we really believe someone would fight so strongly for something they didn't really believe in? Perhaps it's time we consider that even our antagonists may be acting from the same deep personal conviction we feel inside. And if that's the case, shouldn't we be the least bit curious where their convictions come from? Shouldn't we even try to understand those convictions? We all want Carmel to succeed, we just have differing opinions of what success is and what it looks like.

If we must have an enemy to fight, let the enemy be the economic trends which threaten our community and the rising crime wave and our increasingly limited resources, both governmental and natural. We have no time for making enemies of each other.

If we're not careful, life will be what happened to us while we were busy fighting over it.

Carmel offers more than just an exceptional experience of natural beauty. It's architecture, streets, shops and people communicate a very real sense of home. We are a small town of people who know, love and care for each other.

Do not think for a minute the visitors will not recognize when we have stopped feeling at home in our own town and have started playing house strictly for their benefit. They have Disneyland and Las Vegas if fantasy is what they want. We're here to offer the real thing, and what makes it real, bottom line, is our genuine love and conviction for our land and our neighbors.

This commitment is evident in how we honor mother nature, in our the human scale of our architecture and our commitment to beauty and culture in all its diversity.

Our commodity, our stock in trade, is sharing this experience with others. We are ambassadors of a way of life which speaks of harmony between man and nature and an innately more rewarding and fulfilling way of living and working together.

As such, we must look to our business community to be good hosts to our guests, to treat them well, take care of their needs and provide them with the finest quality experience we can give them. At the same time, the residents don't want to feel their business community has forgotten to take care of them as well. After all, this is their home and they do not want to feel forgotten or dispossessed.

If the residents understand they need a business community to take care of their guests and the business community understands they need residents to feel at home in their own town, we have the makings of a very good partnership. The businesses provide a healthy commerce essential to city services and the residents make Carmel home. Both make it attractive to those who visit. Yet businesses and residents, instead of looking like partners in a common goal, often seem curiously at odds.

On April 6, the 2016 Committee will very likely come to conclusion. While I feel relief at the thought of fewer phone calls and another free night in the week, I also feel sadness. Our group has become a kind of family to me, and somehow the future does not look the same without us all sitting around tables in a Sunset Center classroom hammering it out.

And yet, I like to think we will live on in the hearts and minds of all of you who live and work in this special paradise. I like to believe that you will all realize you are the next 2016 Committee and more, the committee of Carmel-by-the-Sea. You have been assigned a far greater responsibility than that of simply writing a report.

Like our committee, you can't take your fights to City Hall, and there's nobody up there to tell you how to do it. You have to figure it out on your own. If you don't find consensus among yourselves, you'll fail in something much more important than producing a signed report. You'll fail in creating a village.

I hope, like our 15 members, you'll discover the easiest way to get what you want is to make sure the other guy gets what he wants at the same time. You will learn that listening requires more than hearing words.

It requires a willingness to question your own cherished beliefs and assumptions.

Maybe you will come to realize as the 2016 Committee did, that we are all members of the same family, that we need each other to make it through the rough times ahead and that we need to be good stewards for one of the most splendid and beautiful places on the earth.

And if you think this is just another dream from just another dream committee member, then stop long enough to take a look at the dream which lives in reality today, the dream of Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Neil Owen Kruse is a designer in Carmel and is chairman of the Carmel 2016 Committee.

Carmel prowler eludes police — security measures encouraged

CARMEL POLICE were "following a variety of leads" Wednesday to identify and arrest an intruder who entered two area homes within the past week.

"We're still looking for the person," Sgt. Dan Clark said. "No one was hurt and there was nothing stolen, but those entries point up the need for adequate security measures on the parts of local homeowners."

Clark said one entry "occurred in town" and the other "in the sheriff's jurisdiction" — both in greater Carmel's northeast portion. Both happened between 2 a.m. and 4 a.m. The intruder fled when residents awoke and went to investigate noises.

"This is a good time for a security update," Clark added. "Before retiring, residents should make sure all doors and windows are locked."

Any Carmel resident wishing them may "pick up security tips at the police department," Clark said. "And we'll conduct home security inspections on request. We also encourage Neighborhood Watch groups by helping them get organized, the bottom line being how to improve residential safety."

ROSIE'S BRIDGE in Carmel Valley is set for reconstruction.

Long-awaited reconstruction of Rosie's Bridge may begin in May

THE LONG awaited reconstruction of Rosie's Bridge in Carmel Valley could begin in May.

On Tuesday the Monterey County Board of Supervisors approved the project after county public works officials confirmed there was enough funding in the budget to boost the estimated $2.2 million cost.

For the past five years, county officials have deliberated to get the project going after incidents of neighborhood children were injured crossing the sole access across Carmel River along Esquiline Road.

The new bridge will be about 40-feet wide with two lanes for traffic plus a pedestrian and equestrian walkway. The existing span is about 22-feet wide with a surface made of metal grate ship-deck that becomes slippery when wet.

The project is scheduled for completion in November.

Day Laborer Center meeting set for April 9 at CV Youth Center

A SECOND town hall meeting to discuss a proposed Day Laborer Center is scheduled to be held at the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center on Ford Road in Carmel Valley, Friday, April 9, at 7 p.m.

The Carmel Valley Day Labor Referral Service Committee have invited Frank Konti of the Wage and Hour Division of the United States Department of Labor to attend the meeting.

He will be on hand to answer legal questions regarding a possible day laborer center in Carmel Valley Village.

The public is encouraged to attend.

Freeway alternatives move forward

Gregg Albright suggested Caltrans would be cooperative in what TAMC has asked it to do.

"Caltrans is committed to working with the local agencies," Albright said. "We don't know how this is all going to evolve, but we are not going to walk away from the problem."

Albright's remark appeared to be in response to concerns that Caltrans would put up a road block against the search for alternatives. "Alternatives to the freeway allow for some modest benefits," Albright conceded.

TAMC and Caltrans may need to assemble a task force in order to develop a consensus best alternative to the canyon freeway, Albright said.

And then there is Mello, who, as a supporter of 1C modified, has little enthusiasm for TAMC's sudden change in direction.

He maintains the county stands to lose the $42 million if it cannot quickly agree on one project. "All this about alternatives — I've been looking at alternatives for 17 years," he said.

Nevertheless, Mello does want to keep the money for some kind of project in the county, even if it doesn't turn out to be 1C modified. He added, "If they (TAMC) want to take another six months to look at something else, that's OK."

Rezoning opponents name new chairman

JIM WRIGHT has accepted the chairmanship of the Citizens Against Rezoning.

Wright, who served on the Carmel City Council from 1983 until last year, has accepted the leadership role in the group that is campaigning to turn back the rezoning of the commercial district, set in motion by a council action in December.

The issue will be decided by the voters in a June 8 referendum.

Wright, also a former planning commissioner, is currently executive director of the Monterey History and Art Association.

Kersnar reception set

A PUBLIC reception at which citizens may meet new City Administrator Jere A. Kersnar will be held on April 9 on the Sunset Center terrace, Carmel mayor Ken White and council members announced Wednesday.

They said the two-hour occasion will start at 4 p.m. that Friday. Refreshments will be offered.

A charge of $5 per person will be collected at the door. Or checks payable to the City of Carmel may be mailed in advance to Box 6025, Carmel, 93921.

Development opponents dismayed, consider lawsuit

By SUSAN BECK

IN THE wake of the Monterey County Board of Supervisors' decision Tuesday, March 30, to approve a higher density for Rancho San Carlos, some opponents of the action are not ruling out a lawsuit.

Attorney Zan Leavy, representing Rancho San Carlos Watch, is dismayed by the 3-2 decision to allow a land use density of one unit per 40 acres for the entire 19,927-acre property.

He said the supervisoral decision ignored the failure to have an adequate Environmental Impact Report (EIR), which could be cause for a lawsuit.

"The EIR is a sketched outline, which allows for a greater number of uses and potential impact on the community that didn't exist before," said Leavy. "They approved a more intensive use at Rancho San Carlos without a water study."

The county's decison mandates that any project on the ranch must adhere to conditions which stipulate the developers are responsible to "prove-up" a water supply that will not take away from the Carmel River aquifer. In addition, the burden of proof for traffic mitigation on surrounding roads is also the developer's responsibility.

The conditions stipulated for any future project at the ranch are not strict enough, Leavy pointed out. "How can anyone judge if a project will take water away from the Carmel River. The conditions are bogus."

He said there are three possibilities for recourse against the board's decision: File a lawsuit, plan a referendum or do nothing. "We can wait for the project specific EIR and defeat it on its merit."

Bruce Dormody, a staunch opponent of the proposed Rancho San Carlos development, is disappointed by the board's decision. But, he said, "Karin and Sam did a great job trying to protect the peninsula."

The next step for the Dormody family, which owns Rancho San Clemente on Robinson Canyon Road adjacent to the Rancho San Carlos, is to closely monitor the ongoing events, said Dormody. If the response against the land use designation is dramatic enough, he added, an initative may be considered.

Supervisors' pleas fall on deaf ears

sources have to go to the residents already here."

Sam Karas, candidate for the 5th district, noted that it is "very rare" for the board to vote as they did Tuesday.

Karas thought the decision came about because the Big Sur coast was not in question, in addition to the presentation and support for the Rancho San Carlos.

In the future, he said, the person who represents the peninsula has to be someone strong who will "push like heck" for their positions.

Another candidate for Strasser Kauffman's present territory, Fran Farina, observed that in the past the supervisor from the district in question would carry more weight.

It does not appear to hold true any longer, she added. "We are coming into very hard times."

For Farina, one thing is clear: The 5th district's revenue generation through permits, commercial establishments and hotel occupancy tax makes the area "very vulnerable."

The challenge, she said, is to use a "highly polished magnifying glass" on proposed developments. "And, I will repeat myself until I'm blue in the face."

Allan Sandstrum, a member of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association ad hoc committee for Rancho San Carlos, considers the boards' overruling a precedent of things to come.

He said that one or two years ago, the two local supervisors would not have been overruled in such a fashion. "Development could get out of hand on the Monterey Peninsula."

Farina enters race

Carmel Valley, Monterey, Pacific Grove, Pebble Beach and Big Sur.

"Major projects by Rancho San Carlos and the Pebble Beach Company as well as others will be coming before the Board of Supervisors in the near future," Farina said. "The 5th District must be represented by a strong environmentalist."

She said it is a mute point to say how she would have voted on the Rancho San Carlos land use question before the supervisors March 30. But she did say, if elected, she "would work to make sure all of the conditions of development are followed. As an attorney, I can do that."

Offering cheers and handshakes at the press conference were Carmel's Barbara Livingston, a city council member, Clayton and Linda Anderson, Howard Skidmore, Steve Brooks and Carmel Valley resident Bob Greenwood. A number of residents and city officials from Pacific Grove were also in attendance.

Farina cited water and traffic as the twin dilemmas facing the peninsula. Her two years as water director, she said, "have given me a wealth of knowledge about our water resources on the peninsula...I believe it is fair to say that water problems will consume a great deal of time at the board of supervisors."

Farina criticized Fourth District Supervisor Sam Karas — who is expected to be one of her six challengers (as of Pine Cone deadline, he had yet to file officially) — for his most recent vote on Fort Ord Reuse Group, which would allow for development on fragile dune areas.

"Losing sight of the environment for the sake of jobs is an approach I wouldn't take," Farina stressed.

Farina characterized herself as "a fiscal conservative who believes in balancing budgets."

Attracting jobs

She added, "We have to attract jobs that pay in the $30,000 to $60,000-a-year range, rather than the $15,000 to $30,000 — by working with research facilities created at the Fort Ord Site. We should be able to attract private businesses that can take research and turn it into reality in the form of products or new technologies."

Farina is optimistic about the opportunities Fort Ord now presents. "Other communities that have faced base closures have found they are stronger for the transition they have gone through. I think the same can go for us."

Carmel Valley Outlook

Rollerblade jock defies the odds

By SUSAN BECK

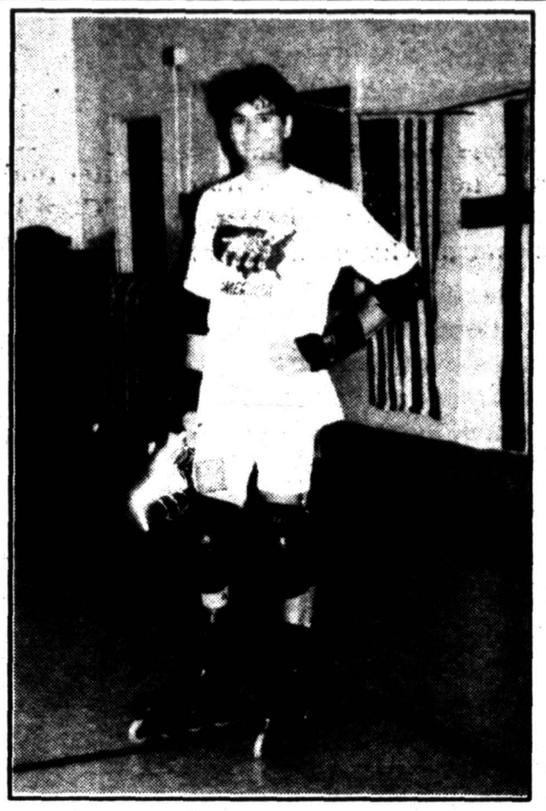
LET ME tell you a story, said 26-year-old Casey Pieretti, to the student body at All Saints' Episcopal Day School in Carmel Valley Thursday, March 25.

The handsome young man in his rollerblade gear stood in front of the students for the specific purpose of getting his message across: Be responsible — don't drink and drive.

Pieretti and his friend, Joel, will be rollerblading from San Diego to Washington, D.C., to spread the word and establish a national artificial limb bank for children through a program called Kids 4 Kids.

Children across the country will create the limb bank by encouraging their friends and family to donate a penny or more for every mile that Pieretti skates.

When Pieretti was 13, he father and brother were killed in an automobile accident caused by a 25-year-old drunken driver at 10 a.m. on a Sunday morning. The youngest son was waiting for them to return from church.



CASEY PIERETTI

"They never came home again." said Pieretti. "It was very difficult to deal with emotionally. It took three years to talk about it."

To Russia — with love

By SUSAN BECK

CYCLING ACROSS Russia is Bill and Rosie Foster's idea of a great time. Especially since the five-month trip is designed to promote saving planet Earth.

On Monday, April 5, the retired Carmel Valley couple will join another biker, Frank Pritchard, and begin their extraordinary journey.

The trip is organized to address awareness and activism about environmental issues, to demonstrate how people of different nations can get together and do something about the environment and to conduct a United Nations water study.

"This is a great chance to get the word out about overpopulation," said Bill Foster. "It's an ecological expedition, and overpopulation is a key component to the problem of environmental destruction."

Several cyclists from other countries will join the local group in the adventure. In addition, there will be a support crew of 15, including a hydrologist and technicians who will be taking samples from the water throughout Russia to test for radiation levels.

Biking 10,000 miles from Paris to Beijing via Russia is quite an endeavor. But, for the Fosters, it's just another spoke in the wheel.

Rosie Foster can't remember when she wasn't biking.

"Some people get into biking," she remarked, "I never got out of it."

On her 30th birthday, she biked from Los Angles to North Carolina in two months. She took her son along, who she said, was taller by the end of the ride. "I'd grown a lot too. But it was on the inside."

When she married Bill, he joined in her bicycle adventures.

"I didn't have time to bicycle," he said, "Then I began to realize that I was putting everything else first — me last."

Cycling, he added, offers the most entertainment, best exercise and stimulation of any sport. And, his temperament is better, he's more active, and getting up the hill has become his favorite part of the ride.

Which explains his determination to make this journey happen despite several uphill obstacles.

As the departure day approached, the project started to fall apart.

"We might not get enough funding," said Foster. "But, we are going to make it happen. If the whole project fails, we're going anyway."

His wife elaborated on her determination to go. "I have no doubt we will make a difference in all of the cities we bike through. Someone has to take the lead — take the initative."

Field trip will check out Clint-proposed project

By SUSAN BECK

A FIELD trip to view the proposed Canada Woods Subdivision in Carmel Valley will be held Friday, April, 2.

The Carmel Valley Citizens' Subdivision Evaluation Committee is conducting the trip starting at 1 p.m. from the Stone House, 7145 Carmel Valley Road, Carmel Valley. The public is invited.

The committee is scheduled to critique the project at 7 p.m., Thursday, May 13, at the Mid Valley Fire Station.

Canada Woods, a proposed subdivision and service center project slated for Carmel Valley, was designed to set an environmental standard for the community.

Innovative venture

In an innovative joint venture, Clint Eastwood, his former wife, Maggie, and Leonard and Emily Williams joined forces to create an environmentally acceptable development that would adhere to the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

Canada Woods Trust combines 500-acres owned by Eastwood on the north side of Carmel Valley Road and 50-acres of farmland owned by the Williams' on the south.

Alan Williams, owner of the Carmel Development Co., which is handling the project, said Eastwood likes the degree of excellence that Canada Woods represents.

"Clint likes to set standards that are good for the community," said Williams. "I'm fortunate to work for him."

Out of the entire 550-acres the project proposal includes 44 residential lots and 15 units for inclusionary and employee housing at the service center. About 80 percent of the property would remain in open space.

Possibly the most provocative aspect of Canada Woods is the proposed use of water for the project.

By diverting some of the farmland water through a sewer treatment plant, said Williams, the rejuvenated nitrate-free water will be used to supply the subdivision.

"We are not proposing another golf course," he added. "The agricultural land water will not be used in a commercial way."

Valley couple charged with abuse of worker

By SUSAN BECK

AFTER AN alleged seven years of abuse, a young woman from Mexico has turned in her purported tormentors.

Monterey County sheriff's officers arrested Armando and Genoveva Dominquez, Carmel Valley residents, for allegedly beating and refusing to pay Consuelo Ortega.

The Monterey County District Attorney's office filed charges Feb. 24. against the Dominquezs. They were arraigned March 18 and are due to appear in Monterey's Municipal Court for a preliminary hearing April 8.

Ortega, an illegal alien, said she was brought here from Central Mexico to work as a housekeeper in the Dominquez home. A sheriff's report states that during the time she worked for the couple, she was beaten, forced to sleep in a garage, underfed, and never paid.

Genoveva Dominquez reportedly has confessed to the beatings.

According to Investigative Sgt. Bill Freeman, who is charge of the case, some of the physical scars suffered by Ortega will require plastic surgery.

Genoveva Dominquez is charged with willfully, unlawfully and maliciously disfiguring a person and with grand theft of labor. Her husband is charged with grand theft of labor and with being an accessory to a felony.

Ortega claims the beatings took place during the past three years. Her first call to the sheriff's department was Oct. 17, 1992. There are no charges for kidnapping or slavery because she was never forcibly detained in the Dominquez home, according to Freeman.

For protection, Ortega's whereabouts are being withheld. According to Freeman, her illegal status in the United States will not interfere with her case.

Immigration activist to fight Carmel Valley day-labor center

By SUSAN BECK

CITIZENS' TAX group spokesperson Mike de Hayden plans to oppose any proposed job center in Carmel Valley Village other than one used strictly for referrals.

The Carmel Valley Day-Laborer Referral Service Planning Committee is considering the possibility of developing a day-laborer job center. Hayden, a resident of Los Lomas, attended a town hall meeting in the village last month that addressed the committee's proposal.

The center is being considered primarily to accommodate the day laborers who utilize Delfino Place as a pick-up location for jobs in the surrounding area.

Speaking for Alliance for California Taxpayers and Involved Voters, Hayden said, "I'll bring the troops out," referring to the group's 12,000 membership. "There are better solutions than a job center."

Using a job center in Marin County as an example, he added, "The hiring hall contributed to a higher amount of illegals in that area."

Hayden perceives the efforts of the committee as encouraging more undocumented workers into Carmel Valley.

But, why would someone who lives near Watsonville be interested in a job center in Carmel Valley?

Hayden is interested in the big picture. Being a resident of Monterey County, he is concerned about the growing number of people coming into the county and the country.

"We can't afford it," said Hayden. "How can we take care of all these people? It's not a racial issue; it's an impact issue."

The main thrust of his concern is the impact of drugs into the community. According to Hayden, the Immigration and Naturalization Service does more drug busting than the Drug Enforcement Agency.

"Illegals bring in more drugs than anyone else we are catching," he added. "Something is very wrong here. I don't know where the illegals are coming from — but they should all be stopped."

One solution, said Hayden, is to impose a military force along the borders. He doesn't advocate violence. But, he does believe the military has to stop the flow of illegals crossing the border, "whatever it takes."

For him, the job center in Carmel Valley represents a perplexing scenario. He questions why city, county and federal officials promote situations that are illegal.

"What really frustrates me," he observed, "is that people come across the border illegally and then are rewarded with hiring centers that provide educational opportunities."

'I'll bring the troops out. There are better solutions than a job center.'

—Mike de Hayden

Hayden is aware the job center proposal for the village stems out of a two-year controversy about workers congregating at Delfino Place without accessible public restrooms.

As for the workers who have been in the village for years, he pointed out, "There has to be some compassion for them."

He said a job referral center is acceptable and offers a simple solution of petitioning the valley residents to support installing portable toilets.

"It's common decency for people to have a bathroom," said Hayden. "I'm for that."

Eastwood's Canada Woods project up for evaluation

Williams is confident Canada Woods will be well received by the community. He said the project was designed with the valley's master plan in mind, and a number of ideas derived from public input are being considered.

The service center will be "beneficial to the community reflecting high priority services such as day-care center and a possible medical facility," he added.

"Clint held off developing his ranch for years," said Williams. "He wants to set some environmental standards he hopes will prevail up and down the valley."

Goals questioned

Ed Haber, president of Quail Lodge, questions the reality of Eastwood's goal, at least in part.

His concern centers around the traffic plan for Canada Woods. Haber said he does not want traffic entering or exiting onto Valley Greens Road, which is parallel to Quail Lodge.

The road designated for the service center is Williams Ranch Road. It is entered from Carmel Valley Road where Earthbound Farms is now located just east of Valley Greens Road.

An additional proposed exit and/or entrance is at the end of Paisano Road at the back of the center. Traffic would run into Valley Greens Road, which Haber contends "would be distressing and harmful to Quail Lodge. Trucks going through would pass near the registration desk."

Williams assured Haber at a recent Carmel Valley Citizens Subdivision Evaluation Committee meeting that he would accept a condition stipulating that no connection between Paisano Road from Valley Greens Road be developed.

"Eastwood came out to see me," said Haber. "He told me he would do nothing to hurt Quail Lodge anymore than he would want traffic going through Mission Ranch."

Despite Eastwood's and Williams' assurances, Haber said he won't be satisfied until his condition is approved by the county planning commission and board of supervisors.

Pieretti to blade across America

He tried to make sense of it and go on with his life. He worked diligently over the summer and received a basketball scholarship for his first year at college.

"I was getting my life back together," he remembered, "and I worked harder than ever. I was living a dream."

The Saturday night before school began, Pieretti went to visit a friend. They went for a ride. The car broke down, so they decided to push it back to the house. Six hundred yards from the garage, a drunk driver passed out and crashed into the back of their car at 55-mile-per-hour.

The next thing he knew, he was in the hospital, one leg in traction, one leg amputated.

"It was totally unbelievable for my family and friends," said Pieretti, "that I was a victim of two unfortunate accidents."

However, that reasoning was not good enough for him. He thought about it a long time while slowly recovering in the hospital. His thoughts lead him to the conclusion that the incidents were not accidents.

"Accidents are something totally unexpected." said Pieretti. "Drinking enough to be drunk and then getting behind the wheel of a car are choices."

It was then he realized he had choices, too: Give up or fight back.

"I took a look at what I had to live for. I was hit by a car going 55 miles per hour. But I lived. I felt so lucky."

Within one year, he ran one mile in seven minutes beating out 50 peers in his first triathlon.

CASEY PIERETTI demonstrated his skills to the students of All Saints' Episcopal Day School in Camel Valley. (Susan Beck photo)

After each achievement, Pieretti rewards himself, which enables him to go after the next goal. His immediate goal is to skate across America to raise money for a limb bank for children who can't afford them.

The determined young man attributes his successes on not knowing how to give up.

"I'm goal oriented," he said, "I don't quit until outside forces make it impossible to keep going. Then, I just change my goal."

FRESH CREAM MOVES TO NEW LOCATION

Fresh Cream, a Monterey tradition since 1978, has moved to a new location at 100C Heritage Harbor (99 Pacific St.), near Custom House Plaza.

General partners Ken Gardner and Steve Chesney have teamed up with architect Dan Fletcher and interior designer Jan Gardner to provide a setting befitting of the restaurant's award-winning cuisine. The main dining area features intimate banquettes, with three other areas — Harbor Room, Bay Room and Wine Room — capitalizing on views of the Monterey Bay. A private banquet room is also available for dinners of 50 people or fewer. Fresh Cream is now open for dinner nightly and Friday only power lunches may be in the offing.

Chef Tim Nugent has no immediate plans for menu changes, although he intends to offer hearty soups and a wider variety of daily specials from his new kitchen. For reservations or further information call 375-9798.

Star athletes compete for RLS

"SCHOOL DAYS, school days, good old golden rule days ... readin' and writin' and 'rithmetic, taught by the tune of a hick'ry stick ..."

Remember that one? Again, I don't know who to credit. But I did find out that T. S. Eliot, of all people, is responsible for the quote I used in my first column, "We shall not cease from exploration ..."

To get to the point, school was the topic at Robert Louis Stevenson School's Tag Weekend. And during the star-studded dinner/auction at The Inn at Spanish Bay last Saturday night, several people addressed the topic.

"I saw RLS and said, "Wow! Don't they (students) get jaded?" said Patrick Wayne after touring the school. He had been touring several private schools with his teenage son when he was introduced to RLS and he was amazed at all the activities offered, from water polo to golf.

Wayne, whose actor father, John Wayne, sent him to parochial schools, said things weren't so good with his acting career right now and mentioned the recession. But he was happy to have won the afternoon tennis toumament, even though the courts were wet. He is nursing a knee injury and said, "It was a little disconcerting. I was pushing it. I was afraid I'd slip."

Shelley Aliotti, president of the Sponsors Club, who hosted the event, was bedazzled by Wayne's good looks and pointed out a galaxy of other stars at the event. Hank Ketcham, who did the adorable Dennis the Menace illustrations for the event, was adorable himself in a fringed leather jacket and 10-gallon hat.

Dick Van Patten looked as bubbly as ever.

Cathy Lee Crosby, who has just formed her own production company, was tanned and vibrant.

Doug McClure looked young and fit as a fiddle, although he said he'd twisted his knee leaping over a puddle at Cypress playing golf the day before. "All things considered, I played tennis well today," he said. He was coughing a bit, however, and probably won't be the only star who came down with a cold after playing in the rain.

Mary Dill, there with her husband, Frank, radio broadcaster, said if they hadn't been playing Cypress she'd never have stayed to play in the rain.

"It's either courageous or stupid," Frank said.

Hal Linden breezed into the party in a dark blue suit, carring a briefcase with God knows what inside. He was chagrined about his performance during the match. "It's the worst I've ever played," he said. And he wasn't smiling.

This was the second year for the weekend golf and tennis tournaments. And Aliotti said last year they raised around $157,000. The year before that, they brought Luciano Pavarotti. And it rained then too!

"That only adds to the charm," she said, and added, "Golfers are crazy."

She said the event is so popular the stars are actually begging to be invited to play. Linden cinched it by saying he also sings!

Co-chair Sharon Larson said they began gathering stars for their first Tag Weekend by working their student and parent contacts. One of the students lives with a 49er; McClure brought Wayne, Efram Zimbalist III went to RLS, and so on.

Thousands of hours went into the event and special credit goes to co-chairs Larson and Laurie Hall, Jill Vogel, and Diane Trabert. Not to mention 200 volunteers and the dozens of sponsors who gave such fabulous auction items as: lunch at 20th Century Fox with Michael Tucker and Jill Eikenberry; "Draw, you Sidewinder," a commissioned portrait by Charles Griffith; "Chuck Wagon Deluxe," dinner at the home of Laurie and Tim Hall; or "Two Tickets to Paradise," a trip to the Virgin Islands.

Keeping RLS thriving is what the fund-raiser was all about. And, to quote one happy parent, I'm thrilled our son, Victor, is going," said Doc Etienne. "He throughly enjoys world cultures and fencing. They have a terrific sports program."

And mom, Char, is only happy to oblige her son by driving 80 miles a day transporting him from his Carmel Valley home to school and back...!

Dining was the topic at Sunday night's Chef of the Year Awards. And, oh, did the Doubletree Hotel put on a sumptuous five-course repast for 230 guests in attendance. The "Mystical Magical Evening" included a fortune teller and magician who pulled a rubber chicken from a hat.

Yes, it was an evening to remember.

Bert Cutino, past president of the American Culinary Federation, both locally and nationally, was delighted to receive a $2,000 check from his friend Paul Sandaz of Columbo Parisian Bread Company. Cutino once did Sandaz a favor and told him he could repay it

SHARON LARSON, an RLS parent, greets Pat and Dick Van Patten at the Tag Weekend festivities at Spanish Bay.

KATHY LEE Crosby, Jill Eikenberry and Michael Tucker were found helping themselves to the sumptuous buffet catered by the chefs at Spanish Bay.

WESTERN DRESS was the theme of the Stevenson school fund raiser. Parents Steve and June Williams found actor Hal Linden happy to sign their program.

BERT CUTINO put a "Horizons 2,000" pin on Paul Sandaz, of Columbo Parisian Bread Company, thanking him for a $2,000 donation to the Horizons 2,000 fund. Beat Giger, Chef's Association president, and Julio Ramirez look on.

by contributing to the federation's scholarship fund called Horizon 2,000.

But the biggest award went to Christian Sprecher, executive chef at the Hyatt Regency Monterey. These chef of the year awards have been held since 1975.

P.S. Cutino said the Sardine Factory has been completely revamped. Can you imagine that? All those years of stately tradition. But he says old-timers love it. Let's go see...

Future Fun

Includes: the 4th Annual Black & White Race Week Kick-off Party, sponsored by SCRAMP and Soroptimist International of Carmel Bay. They've decided on a dress-down affair at the Laguna Seca track itself. It's April 15, from 6-10 p.m.. And they say "We're doin' it in a tent, dancin' at the track, with a silent auction too." Sounds racy! Tickets $35.

Or, how about hoofin' it for the March of Dimes? Walk America starts at Monterey Peninsula College on Sat., April 24 at 8:30 a.m. Call (408) 271-4752.

"Invite Some Bunny to Dinner," a benefit for the Easter Seal Society, will be held April 4, between 5 and 10 p.m. When you dine at Bindel's, The Old Bath House, Monterey Joe's or The Tinnery, a portion of the dinner sale will benefit the local society. Call 649-3731.

Clint still reigns supreme

The roof of the Beach and Tennis Club, Pebble Beach was nearly jettisoned into space from the whoops and hollers of a hundred or so guests Monday night, when it was announced on the big screen that Clint had won best director.

And when, at the end of the Monterey County Film Commission's "Evening with Oscar," Clint got best picture... well, the place simply went into orbit.

Sam Karas, there with Edie, nearly leaped out of his seat. Only moments before, he had been given an award himself. It was presented by Warren Sharpe, who said it was for the best western in Monterey County (Sam had a bit part in "Unforgiven," you know) and for all his support of the commission.

Doug McClure was one of the stars who appeared at the tennis club in person. As he watched the awards on TV he seemed expressionless.

Nor was Cliff Robertson jumping up and down, except to greet people. "It's a bit overdrawn," he said of the Academy Awards. "It's an emotional crowd."

He admitted he's pretty down to earth himself. "I never lived in LA LA land." Just La Jolla. He also said he was in the Philippines when he won the Oscar, so he escaped all the hoopla.

Rosemary Snider, there with her husband, John, said the high point of her life was to attend the awards and that watching them on TV now was a letdown.

However, the rest of the evening's movie-goers seemed tio content to dine while watching the tube...

JOE LONG, chairman of the Monterey County AIDS Project Academy Awards Night Benefit, hovers benignly over guests Steve Reese and Helen Jacques of Carmel and Doug Courtney of Monterey.

PEGGY COMPTON, center, and Fleece Dennis, left, were co-chairs of the annual Carmel Women's Club Fashion Show. They are showing some of the door prizes given away at the luncheon to president Pat Hazard, right.

SAM KARAS, Barbara Brooks and Cliff Robertson stared intently at the large screen TV during the Monterey County Film Commission's "Evening with Oscar."

THE PEOPLE who put together the elegant Academy Awards party and silent auction for the Monterey County Film Commission were Reese Taylor, auction chair, Julie Armstron, executive director and Karen Nordstrand, assistant director.

By Chef Wendy Brodie

On to India

THE MASSES of people and vehicles in Bangkok almost prepared me for India. Arriving in New Dehli and then driving north east to the foothills of the Himalayas to the hill station of Mussoorie was an incredible journey.

By map the distance and mileage looked like it would take about two hours by car. Ha ha, almost 12 hours later, after dodging people, the sacred cows (Gary Larson must capture these cows with an attitude), water buffalo, camels, elephants, buses, huge trucks, bicycles, two and three-wheeled motorcycles, cars, carts, and anything that can haul, the destination was reached in a most frazzled condition.

After a good nights sleep I was ready for the thrill of more new foods. This cuisine is just as I expected it to be from my Time-Life books of curries, tandoori dishes, dals (lentils) naan and puris (unleavened breads), yogurts, chutneys, spices and seasonings and rices.

I was impressed with the hot, freshly-made breads and the cooling yogurts. The curries were different and delicious, and tasting an authentic tandoori chicken was a highlight. I am including some recipes that will take two articles to give you.

When I returned, I was anxious to see if my Indian cookbooks could duplicate the bread experience; and the answer is yes, as long as they are hot and fresh.

Puris: Deep-fried unleavened whole-wheat bread

(Puffed breads) Makes 12 puris. Ingredients: 1 cup whole wheat pastry flour or 1/2 cup regular whole wheat and 1/2 cup all-purpose flour, 1/4 tsp. salt, 1 TBSP. vegetable oil, 1/4 cup water, vegetable oil for deep frying.

Method: In a large mixing bowl combine the flour, salt and vegetable oil. Mix these ingredients together by rubbing the oil into the flour with your fingers. Now add 1/4 cup of water to the bowl and begin blending the ingredients with both hands. Soon the flour and water will begin to bind together into a smooth, fine-textured dough.

If the dough seems too dry and flaky, add another tsp. of water while continuing to knead. Add still another tsp. of water until the desired consistency is reached. Grease the surface of a rolling board with a few drops of oil and transfer the dough from the bowl to the greased surface. Continue to knead the dough by pushing it back and forth with the palms of your hands while wrapping the dough around itself. Knead the dough for 10 to 12 minutes until it takes on a very smooth consistency. Gather the dough into a ball and divide into 12 to 14 equal-size portions. Roll each piece into a ball and flatten between the palms of your hands. Now place a few drops of oil on the rolling surface. With a light, even rolling motion, roll out each piece of dough into a 4-inch diameter circle. The roundness of the puri will affect how well the dough will inflate when cooked. Roll out all the puris and spread them out on a dry surface. Pour 1-1/2 to 2 cups of vegetable oil in a shallow pot or a wok (the wok requires less oil than a pot). Heat over a medium flame until a piece of dough immediately bubbles to the surface when dropped in. When the oil is hot, take one of the round puris and gently ease it into the oil. The puri will first drop to the bottom and then rise to the surface. As soon as it reaches the surface, gently turn it over with a slotted spoon. If everything is right the puri will now inflate like a balloon and float on the surface of the oil. Turn the puri again and cook until both sides are a light, golden brown.

Do not be disappointed if the puris do not inflate every time. This might happen for any number of reasons, but the flat puris still taste very good. When the puri has finished cooking, remove from the oil and let the excess oil drain back into the wok or pot. Carefully place the puris in a serving dish lined with paper towels to absorb any oil still on them. To make sweet puris add 2 TBSP brown sugar or honey with the flour and oil in the first step. If brown sugar is used add 1/4 cup of water; if honey is used add 2 TBSP. water and bind the ingredients together to form a smooth dough. Deep fry as directed, except that the sweet puris should be allowed to become a little darker than the plain.

Ummmm good.

Carmel Youth Baseball

By Pat Little

Lucido honored on opening day

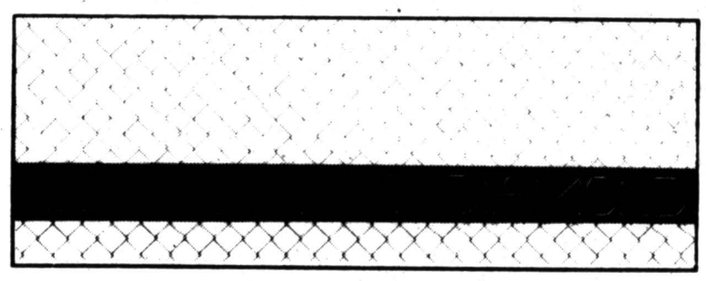
OPENING DAY for Carmel Youth Baseball last Saturday was sandwiched between two storms. Because of this good timing, Larson field was flooded with people instead of rain.

CYB supporters and the families and friends of about 350 players turned out to usher in the new season. The skies were overcast; it was a little cool; and the flags picked up some wind, but in general the comfortable weather held up for most of the team pictures, a delicious breakfast prepared by Katy Curry of the Wagon Wheel restaurant, and the opening ceremonies presided over by league president Mark Boitano. The teams even enjoyed a round of round-robin play before the first drops of rain began to fall.

Boitano began the ceremonies by dedicating the Bronco field in memory of John Lucido, an early and longtime supporter of CYB. Lucido, who was instrumental in getting the league started, played, coached, and taught for CYB, and also played for the Yankees. He died in an automobile accident last November. Family members of Lucido were on hand to receive the honor on his behalf.

The 29 teams that make up this year's league were introduced, with the division leaders called up to deliver the first pitches. Dave Travaille directed a strike to Luke Perkins of the Pinto division (ages 7&8). Wayne Wood planted one in the glove of Mustang Division's (ages 9&10) Jimmy Stoddard. Bronco division's (ages 11&12) Keith Fogg hurled to Jamie Eccher. Chris Olow stepped up to the mound twice to do the honors for girls' softball Rookie (ages 9&10) and Minor (ages 11&12) divisions, with Jillian Nemeth catching for Rookie and Marissa Grosnick for Minor. Pat Stadille threw to Major (ages 13 & 14) catcher Sarah Coombe.

Schedules for the teams are posted at Larson. Weather permitting, be there to enjoy the games and look here in this column for the highlights.



THE BRONCO field was dedicated March 27 in the memory of John Lucido. (Doug Thompson photos)

Rancho San Carlos gets OK

At the meeting and before, an assortment of Rancho San Carlos partners, an attorney and an environmental resource specialist had all lobbied hard for the board to follow in its planning commission's footsteps.

There was, however, another viewpoint on the one-to-40 land use designation. It was perceived by some as a not-so-generous deal put forward by eager developers who were pushing county officials to tailor broad land use planning to their specific development.

The board's vote to set a land use designation fashioned amendments to the Monterey County General Plan and the Greater Monterey Peninsula Area Plan.

Staunch opponents of the one-to-40 designation, like Bruce Dormody, were not impressed by the prospect of an open space nearly 18,000-square-foot easement.

"Most of the land in this preserve cannot be built on anyway," explained Dormody, whose family owns and operates San Clamente Rancho, a 2,000-acre spread adjacent to Rancho San Carlos. "The density proposed is too high for this land. When are the supervisors going to recognize the rights of adjacent property owners?"

As it turned out, however, there were a number of property owners in neighboring areas who came to the public hearing to sing the praises of the proposed development and the prospect of a large open space easement.

Some of these property owners admitted they had serious concerns when the Rancho San Carlos Partnership acquired the land three years ago; now their concerns have been assuaged.

But to Dormody and a couple of dozen others, those concerns are still alive — and varied. There are many skeptics on Rancho San Carlos' claims that there is adequate water underground to develop an independent water system.

Accounting for nearly half of the speakers at the public hearing, proponents of the one-to-160 designation noted theirs was the "preferred" alternative outlined in the draft environmental impact report on Rancho San Carlos.

The supervisors unanimously certified the EIR, declaring it an "adequate" document on which to base a vote.

Casting votes

In the end, the supervisors who supported the one-to-40 — Tom Perkins, Barbara Shipnuck and Judy Pennycook — were terse in their comments. Karas and Strasser Kauffman, visibly distressed, were more verbose.

"The days of large-scale development in Carmel Valley are gone," declared Strasser Kauffman. "There is so little left in terms of our basic resources that we have to steward the needs of our existing residents first. I need better evidence that we can allow more than one unit per 160 acres."

Laubs, city settle dispute

AFTER YEARS of costly litigation for both sides, the City of Carmel and Carmel entrepreneurs Paul and Connie have tentatively settled their differences.

It was announced Tuesday, March 30, after a closed session of the Carmel City Council, that attorneys had reached agreement on a series of lawsuits concerning the Laubs' commercial building on the northeast corner of Dolores and Ocean.

"We appreciate the Laubs' coming to the table and resolving the long-standing problems," said Carmel Mayor Ken White.

Paul Laub, who publishes Freedom of Speech, told The Pine Cone Wednesday the agreement has to be approved by the Carmel Planning Commission.

Laub said he has spent about $500,000 fighting city hall over roughly seven years, as he has disputed zoning codes restricting the multiple commercial spaces in the former bank building.

The city had spent some $100,000, according to White. Laub told the newspaper he believes that sum is over twice that much. The city has been represented by Pacific Grove attorney Michael Stamp.

Doris Day's Best Friends

By Doris Day

Treating glaucoma

ONE OF MY friends has a darling Basset Hound who had a history of conjunctivitis. The last time "Wally's" eyes became inflamed and puffy, his owner was certain he was suffering from the same old problem. Imagine her dismay when Wally was diagnosed with glaucoma. This was especially shocking because Wally had already been tested twice for glaucoma and the results were negative.

When Wally was examined by a veterinary specialist, we learned that glaucoma means increased pressure in the eye. A healthy eye has a balance between fluid production and fluid drainage. When glaucoma occurs, there is an excessive accumulation of fluid that cannot properly drain. This can be an inherited condition or it can result from an injury or another problem like cataracts.

Veterinary specialists first look for symptoms, including swelling, excessive tearing (although in Wally's case he had reduced tear production), squinting and inflamed, congested whites of the eyes. A measurement of the pressure build-up in the eye further helps the veterinarian to make his diagnosis but since that pressure can fluctuate, it is possible that the reading will be normal as it was both times Wally was tested. To make a definitive diagnosis, the specialist has equipment to inspect the interior of the eye.

Glaucoma is incurable and progressive. It usually leads to partial or total blindness. Drops and medications can help ease the pain and lower the pressure in the eye. There are surgical procedures that try to destroy part of the tissue that produces the fluid or make new drainage channels. If the eye is already blind, the veterinarian may insert a prosthesis or an implant.

Glaucoma is not contagious but both eyes can certainly be affected if it is a hereditary condition. It may be necessary to treat the good eye to help prevent or at least delay the onset of glaucoma.

Several months after the diagnosis, Wally is doing really well. He is responding to his medication and surgery is not indicated. The pressure and pain are under control and there is no sign of glaucoma in his healthy eye. Wally is grateful and so are we.

Our telephone lines have been ringing off the hook with callers telling us they can no longer keep their precious pets. These doggies and kitty-cats are absolutely placeable housepets and we need your help. PLEASE call 625-4017 if you have room in your home and your heart for a little four-legger. We desperately want to hear from you.

Task force charts future of facilities

Considering many issues

The School Facilities Task Force will be considering many issues during its next five meetings. Among them are:

- student safety and welfare
- handicap access, to bring the district's facilities into compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act
- energy conservation
- funding sources
- the proposal to sell River School, using proceeds to build a new elementary school at the Carmel Middle School site
- student generation rates (enrollment projection based on new development, etc.)
- school capacities
- pending state legislation that would make it easier to pass a general obligation bond

"That 'Measure A' need hasn't gone away," said Baldwin, referring to the district's schools improvement tax initiative that nearly passed in June 1991. Under the new bill, a parcel tax would require only a majority vote for passage, rather than the two-thirds vote currently required to pass a school measure.

The district has three options, according to Baldwin: to annually direct general fund money for capital outlay needs when necessary, continue participating in the State Deferred Maintenance Program (a matching-funds program for public schools), or seek alternative funding sources, such as a general obligation bond or parcel tax.

Following the task force introduction, the principals from each of the CUSD schools had an opportunity to outline their immediate facilities needs to the audience, which included staff, board and community members.

Interestingly, while CUSD elementary schools struggle with lack of space and growing enrollment, the high school and middle school seem to need the most refurbishing and renovation.

"It's falling apart"

"What you can't see here is that it's falling apart," said Carmel High School Principal Marie Ishida. "Actually it's rather remarkable it's in such good shape considering how old it is."

Ishida said Carmel High's immediate needs include painting and renovating, roofing, and maintenance of playing fields. CHS boasts a very low student-teacher ratio, only 24 to one, according to Ishida.

"We feel we are blessed with the facility at Carmel Middle School," said that school's Principal Karl Pallastrini, noting that the facilities, though in need of maintenance, are adequate for the 556 students currently enrolled there.

Pallastrini said his immediate concerns include solving drainage problems on the campus and playing fields, landscaping and repairing the gymnasium floor. The CMS student-teacher ratio is slightly higher than that of CHS — about 28 to one — but still well below the state-recommended ratio of 33 to one.

Baldwin estimated there is probably about $500,000 worth of needs at CMS alone. Safety and access are a bigger problem now than when the school was first built, according to Baldwin, because of speeding traffic on Carmel Valley Road.

Carmel Valley High School, which serves between 45 and 90 students annually, is made up of portable classrooms exclusively, according to Principal Blake Fuessenich. He said CVHS has had the same portables since 1975. In need of roof repairs and new carpet, Fuessenich acknowledged the portables' "time is about due."

"We don't have any facilities problems per se right now," said Barbara Beck, director of the Carmel Child Development Center (Carmelo).

But that's not what the district's three elementary school principals were contending.

Elementary schools impacted

Tularcitos Elementary School Principal Karen Camilli said "enrollment has slowly by steadily crept up over the last few years." Four portables are already in use, according to Camilli, and three kindergarten classes are housed in a single partitioned building which isn't big enough. The elementary school may need to hire a fourth kindergarten teacher next year if enrollment figures warrant. Total current enrollment at Tularcitos stands at 515, with 523 students projected for the 1993-94 school year.

Camilli cited "Lake Tularcitos," another severe drainage problem brought on by heavy winter rains.

"We have a severely impacted plant," said River Elementary School Principal Sharron Douglas, noting that immediate needs there include space for storage, counseling, the Primary Intervention Program and the Gifted and Talented Education program.

While the entire River School site encompasses 9.2 acres, only 4.5 acres are usable because the remaining property is considered wetlands and subject to periodic flooding, according to Douglas.

At Captain Cooper Elementary School in Big Sur, Principal Paul Behan said space needs include a building for kindergarten activities, a classroom for the English as a Second Language program, a computer lab and a staff bathroom. Faculty members currently share bathroom facilities with students.

"You've got 27 acres there," quipped Baldwin, which drew laughs from the audience.

"Yes, but watch out for poison oak," Behan responded.

The School Facilities Task Force will hold its second meeting at 4 p.m. Tuesday, April 13 in the CMS library. Status reports will be given on district-owned property not currently used, the feasibility of selling River School and school rehabilitation needs. The meeting will also include a brief overview of funding options.

scure documents, making his plea from under the brim of a 10-gallon hat. Many have said of him that he tends to be an incessant thorn in the side of whatever panel is presiding.

He believes his approach has been effective.

"I am very proud of the work I've done on the freeway in the last five years, and I believe it has qualified me to know about the 5th District in all manners," he said.

Earlier this year, the Carmel Residents Association, for the first time, named two people Carmel Citizen of Year. Mapstead and the more conventional Skip Lloyd share the common goal of terminating the freeway proposal, but their styles are a study in contrasts.

Although his decision to put his name on the June 8 ballot was made at the last minute, he had been encouraged to run by a number of people from as early as December. Mapstead said he had no trouble raising the $574 filing fee.

(As of Pine Cone press time Wednesday, March 31, Mapstead hadn't filed his campaign forms, but he reported he was preparing to do so.)

Summing up his campaign, Mapstead said he is "an advocate of increasing the quality of life and making this a model community for living in harmony with the environment."

Mapstead is a big fan of public transportation, which can serve the interests of both the environment and "eco-tourism." Asked whether he believes people would use expanded bus services enough to justify it, he said, "Absolutely."

Conducting tours

Most know Mapstead in the context of Hatton Canyon, where he has led hundreds of people on tours for the Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club. He has also been active in trying to stop development in Carmel's Pescadero Canyon.

Yet, noted the 42-year-old Mapstead, "I am not anti-development. I am for preserving quality-of-life.

els, working with younger students using positive reinforcement.

A "community of learners"

"The 'tutees' feel helped, and the tutors feel like they're doing something worthwhile," Behan said of the program, dubbed "a community of learners."

He said Captain Cooper School will begin to take advantage of the abundance of state parks in the area by initiating a science program called "a community of teachers." The program will include numerous field trips and visits by rangers, according to Behan.

Colleen Ahrens, a parent on the school's building committee spoke of "the critical need for extra space" at Captain Cooper.

"Our immediate need is to get some additional space for our kindergartners and first-graders," Ahrens said, citing an idea to purchase a large dome from a company called Pacific Yurts, Inc.

While the domes are relatively inexpensive and easy to maintain, according to CUSD President Frank Pinney, the response from fire marshals has not been positive, due to building code problems with the "Yurt."

Additionally, Baldwin cited problems with the Yurt's inability to conform to the Americans With Disabilities Act, which requires public buildings to provide access for handicapped persons.

Behan said space concerns at Captain Cooper are a matter of "balancing what would be best for the school with what we can afford."

In other action

Additionally, the board:

• Approved February warrants totaling $263,356.

• Authorized two new adult course outlines – "Meditation for Well Being" and "The Sneaky Gourmet."

• Heard a presentation from Montgomery on the state Charter School Programs, which could be interpreted as a strategy to diffuse the debate between public and private schools.

• Unanimously approved an initial board proposal to the California School Employees Association regarding contract negotiations for the 1992-93 school year.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Doris Eaton Travis left school in 1918 at age 14 to become a Ziegfield Follies dancer. The Norfolk, Virginia, native went on to play small roles in movies and on stage. She built her experience as a dance instructor into ownership of 19 dance studios in Michigan, sold them and moved to Oklahoma with her husband to raise quarter horses and to complete her education. In 1981 she started taking one or two courses a semester at the University of Oklahoma. In 1992 she got her bachelor's degree in history with honors, was elected to Phi Beta Kappa and at 88 became the university's oldest grad.

Father Farrell's Wisdom

You know you're old when all you exercise is caution

AN INDIAN Maharaja who was assassinated because he delayed in liquidating his arch-rival once observed: "To walk is better than to run, to stand is better than to sit, and to be dead is the best of all."

He got his wish.

How much this dismal view of life we attribute to a debilitation climate of India we do not know, but Montaigne's phrase is more acceptable: :"Let death take a man still planting cabbages."

Without vitality, life becomes as void of gaiety and zest as a wood where no birds sing. Oh Lord, may we always keep active working for you through our neighbors. Finally, may we remember that we've reached old age when all we exercise is caution.

Performance Carmel series imports bright mask troupe in special gift for youngsters

PERFORMANCE CARMEL — the bright series created by City Cultural Director Brian Donoghue — next offers the theater mask ensemble called Imago.

This imaginative troupe will appear at 8 p.m. Saturday, April 3, in Sunset Center Theater.

To the usual ticket prices ($14.50 and $12) has been added a special student rate of $8. "We felt that this presentation was something which young folks would enjoy especially well," a Cultural Office spokesperson said.

Ducats may be picked up there during regular business hours — or at the door on show night.

Imago is described as building "an imaginative dream world of unique characters and creatures, using a spectacular array of masks and costumes."

Says one critic: "(It's) an ingenious group. Americans based in Oregon and trained in the inimitable French style, they combine the best of that school with American flair for the unusual."

Jerry Mouawad and Carol Uselman, artistic directors and founding members, have a combined background in the Lecoq method of mime, contemporary dance, movement theater and traditional mask styles. Since 1978, it is said, the collective has "created an inventive kind of theater in which masks are not just for the face, but for the entire body. The term 'mask' is redefined."

They've been awarded the highest ranking of the Dance Film Association in New York, acclaimed by National Young Audiences for their children's theater programs, granted funding (twice) by the National Endowment for the Arts.

One more critic's blurb: "(They give) humor a bright new face. Next time they're playing within 50 miles, gather up the children and go."

Tickets ($7 general and $5 for students and seniors) will be available at the door. Information and reservations: 646-4220.

WESTERN STAGE of Salinas (New Works Division) will offer an "all-inclusive and multidimensional" Salinas River New Visions Festival in the fall, it was announced this week.

The fest will include "a new adaptation in collaboration with author Ray Bradbury," it was stated.

Also promised was "an exploration of the issues and cultural stereotypes exposed by Philip Kan Gotanda's Yankee Dawg You Die."

The festival will bring forth experimental work, solo art, storytelling, concerts, readings and "discussion of several new works in progress."

Subscription and special season packages are on sale now — 755-6816.

EVERY THURSDAY evening in April, actor and literary researcher Taelen Thomas will present his one-man show about writer Jack London at Carmel's La Playa Hotel.

The one-hour offering starts at 7:30 p.m. Taelen's Jack tells tales ("joys and scandals") from the Bohemian art colony that once flourished in the city.

Tickets range in cost from $7 to $10. Reservations recommended: 624-4010.

By JOHN DOTSON

(Editor's note: The tremendously influential Children's Experimental Theater in Carmel was founded 33 years ago by Marcia Gambrell Hovick. Marcia was instrumental in helping to preserve the historic Forest Theater; she and her former students continue to affect our cultural vitality in large ways. We felt it was time to spotlight the creative and contributive person. And so Pine Cone theater critic John Dotson interviewed Hovick at length. The following is the first of four parts.)

Do you want to say your name?

Well, my name is Marcia Gambrell Hovick. I use all three names with great reluctance because the world of children's theatre is full of dreadful ladies of uncertain age with bad breath who use all three names and have become great authorities on whatever on earth they do and who jealously guard their turf from other peoples' turf. Actually I use all three because at one point in my life, when I was divorced, I thought I would drop the Hovick and simply use my maiden name since most of the work I do and most of my gifts are not from the marriage but from my place of birth — my family, my gifted relatives, my eccentric genetic inheritance. But I never did, because I was still raising one son who was off at Princeton, one who was in high school, and the other young ones. So I stayed with all three dreadful names, and I expect I'll end up like the other ladies, you know, hissing in the background off-stage.

What does it feel like to be the founding mother of an institution?

Oh, what a dreadful thought! The matron is as incarcerated as the residents.

But there is an enormous accomplishment . . .

I hope there is. All of the knowledge I have has been given to me by wise people. I think of CET as a consortium. We have had and have marvelous people. We have been a very poor theater, and when I began I wasn't thinking in terms of creating something that was going to go on forever. Even 33 years is a forever. My focus was almost always, What are we doing now and what is the next step? I haven't codified, organized. I've got no retirement; neither has anyone else connected with us.

When did you first arrive in Carmel?

My first visit was as an undergraduate at Mills College when I came down as a Trustees' Scholar to have luncheon on Strawberry Hill with some member of the board.

Did you have a notion then that you might give birth to a children's theater here?

No, no, no, no, no. It was a wonderful place, but after that visit, I met and married my husband at the end of my junior year. Jack was in the Navy, and Chris was born a day before our first anniversary. When Jack went to medical school, I became a medical wife. From the time I was married until the time my son Nick was small, I gave up theater completely.

When Jack was in his senior year in medical school, he just was never home, I mean literally, never at home. I was alone raising two little boys by myself, taking them to Sunday school, doing this and that, going to the library. I saw a notice in the paper about the Play Shop at Johns Hopkins — which made it all right to get involved, because it was part of the university. I went over just to try out. I did a show, and then I did another show and then another show.

We were having trouble because I had no sitters, and when Jack had an evening at home, I wasn't necessarily there. I made a life for myself, and I got better at what I did. I worked at the Hopkins children's theater; both my boys were in it. I began to be around people who thought what I was doing mattered. I really began to act. I was dazzling and I didn't know it. Then our daughter Kirsten arrived, and we moved.

So you had to set aside everything?

Everything. We went from Baltimore to Birmingham. I went to try out for Elizabeth the Queen and got the lead. Then, after a year and a half, we moved to Bakersfield. I could tell you fascinating things about how you travel across country with children and a truck load of furniture and no money. We lived there

'Country Cops' not arresting

(Editor's note: Stuff happens. An incomplete and unsigned version of this review ran in last week's edition. With apologies to our readers and the writer, here's the full piece.)

By JAMES P. KINNEY

THERE IS a discernible and lamentable process traceable to the very beginnings of the Reagan Reign in the early 1980s. Historians, who are already examining this embarrassing era, will eventually give it their own name. I like to refer to it as The Dumbing of America.

Politically, the process was recognizable by the sheer amount of hogwash inflicted on and accepted by the American public: Ed Meese as honest cop; Ollie North as patriot; Reagan himself as a person capable of consistent thought.

Madonna is residue?

Artistically, residue of this process can still be seen on our TV screens in shows like Married with Children and in popular icons like Madonna and Michael Jackson.

It can even be seen in our local daily paper in a barely readable weekly column put out by a Joe Something which fawningly concerns itself almost exclusively with the foibles and idiocies of our neighborhood's Rich and Famous. The assumption, I guess, is that these luminaries are somehow worthy of our attention. This Dumbing of America has clearly not been lost on smart marketing people overseas. Shrewd salesmen there have known for at least half a century that we will buy anything if it's stupid enough.

An import

Which brings me finally to the piece of theatrical drivel imported from somewhere Down Under called Country Cops and arriving this past weekend onstage at GroveMont's Monterey Playhouse.

Written by Robert Lord, directed by John Rousseau, this farce set in a New Zealand police station manages somehow to fill up two hours' time without one memorable line, one relationship worth reflecting on, one piece of insight above the standard junior high school mentality.

The storyline is so negligible it might have been lifted intact as scrawled on the walls of a middle school restroom.

Two certifiably moronic cops are joined by an idiot detective to solve a double murder in a small town. The prime suspect is an imbecile handyman.

The dim-witted wife of one of the cops is pregnant by the other. That's it.

No program notes

How highly this storyline was esteemed by the director and GroveMont's dramaturg can be seen in the fact neither of them supplied program notes for the imported turkey.

A cast of five local actors takes this unpromising material and turns it into nearly 120 minutes of continuous sight gags, predictable pratfalls and insights well below the IQ of even regular American viewers.

For the record, the production is directed at breakneck speed by Rousseau. And necessarily so. Little of anything real is going on here.

Michael Jacobs turns in yet another rococo variation on a basic Groucho Marx theme. Jerry Gill brings a certain likeability to the less dim cop.

Kevin Nolan Caston reverts to his Spastic Stork impression as seen locally in earlier productions. Apparently no bones were broken. Lyn Whiting and Jeffrey Thomas Heyer both deserve credit for repeated quick costume changes — she from Plain Jane wife (with the show's only consistent Aussie accent) into a trashily-dressed, bortsch-accented authoress; he from dense handyman into stuffy local also operating with one oar out of the water.

The show runs through April 25. Information: 649-0340.

Who cares about realism when this one finally heats up?

The movie: Sommersby
Starring: Richard Gere, Jodie Foster
Where: Lighthouse Cinemas
Director: Jon Amiel
Rating: ★ ★ ★ (good)

By PAUL WOLF

THE FILM Sommersby (seen at Lighthouse Cinemas) is one of those that reminds us of what things were like in simpler times. It is also a vivid reminder of how much movies are willing to suspend our disbelief for the sake of a story.

After all, this is the third incarnation of the basic plot. The last one included a Medieval Gerard Depardieu in the French picture, The Return of Martin Guerre (1983).

Sommersby, set in the South during Reconstruction, succeeds against the odds because it ably combines romance, tragedy and mystery.

Given the setting, the premise may not be so far out. A man (Richard Gere) goes off to war for four years, drifts for another two, returns only to have to prove he is who he says he is. No blood tests here, no fingerprints. Expert testimony consists of the shoemaker remembering this fellow's shoe size.

Surely we have stepped into a simpler age. When, in court, Mrs. Jack Sommersby (Jodie Foster) calls her husband an imposter, we get this kind of exchange:

Judge (James Earl Jones): "Are you sure he is not your husband?"

Wife: "Yes, I'm sure."

Judge: "How do you know?"

Wife: "Well, you see, it's when we are together in a private way..."

By this time, the movie has really begun to heat up — who cares about realism? By the end one encounters a refreshing study of identity beyond mere names, of convictions beyond conventional morals.

Finding fault

Director Jon Amiel has not directed a perfect film. For starters, it drags considerably in the first 45 minutes.

The plot is indeed creeping forward, but that may not keep the viewer from yawning.

Then there is the intriguing pair of Gere and Foster. In the film's first half, they have too little to do to generate chemistry — save for getting closer physically and eventually learning they are compatible in the sack.

After their reunion, the only threat to their relationship is an oily character named Orin, whom Mrs. Sommersby had promised to marry before Jack Sommersby resurfaced.

Orin, however, is presented as so irredeemably evil that he never becomes a genuine rival for the woman's affections.

Foster = brilliance

Jodie Foster, as always, is intense and brilliant, portraying a woman who is both strong-willed and gripped by doubts. Gere is occasionally wooden, and, with his '90s hair and mock Southern accent, poorly fitted to this period piece. Jones — by his imposing presence alone — is a scene-stealer in the pivotal courtroom sequence.

Perhaps most importantly, the ending does not disappoint. Despite its unlikely premise, the film supplies its viewers with much to talk about when they leave the theater.

Fiery band Pele Juju plays exciting benefit at MPC

By MARCIA GALVIN

ON SATURDAY, March 27, in Monterey Peninsula College gymnasium, the all-woman Santa Cruz band Pele Juju drew a dance concert crowd of more than 300 gladful folks.

The occasion was designed as a benefit for the Esselen Indian Tribe and Windows to the West, a local non-profit corporation.

Some of the money had been pledged to help purchase land for a sacred ceremonial ground and Native American education center. It is sad that barely enough money to cover expenses was brought in.

Upbeat mood

The ambiance was upbeat, energetic and free from problems that arise when alcohol is sold. The flyer said "No alcohol please," and the people honored that request.

An atmosphere of respect and care for each other permeated the huge room. The evening had been clearly well-organized by Heather Secord, excellent local singer and drum player.

The night began with Berenice Torrez, a local Pomo Indian woman, an elder and a grandmother who gave a prayer for Mother Earth. She spoke in her native language, saying it is a "gift from God." She said prayers for the women, children and animals to be protected from harm also.

Clacker sticks, which come from elderberry trees, were also part of the sacred prayer time.

Tom Little Bear Nason, a Native American leader hereabouts, educated me by sharing that the United Nations proclaimed 1993 as the year of indiginous people. With attempts locally to build dams, make freeways and build subdivisions, he continued, the need to dance and "take action for the spirit, the lives of the people, is very important."

Meanwhile, there was plenty of room to dance, and people really enjoyed the open space to express themselves. Most of the dancers were facing towards the women of Pele Juju; they were watching and digesting all of the band's talent and skillful creations.

All of the songs that they performed, and have on compact discs or cassettes, were written by the women in Pele Juju, who have extensive and developed musical backgrounds.

African experience

Group originator Molly Higbie lived in Ghana as a teenager. Her journey with music began with learning to play the piano. From the African culture and people she learned the "use of music to create community."

So Pele Juju formed nearly seven years ago. From an interview with members Christiane Baldus and Michele Landegger, I learned a lot about their creative work.

Some of their songs grow from their jam sessions; some evolve from specifically developed ideas of an individual or individuals of Pele Juju. They bring the ideas to rehearsal and together they work on a bass line or a rhythm that fits well. Sometimes one of the drummers brings a new rhythm to practice and they all create from it. Sometimes one person, often Molly Higbie or Dana Hutson, will bring a song and together the group will develop the arrangement with a lot of "chaos and magic." They all are deeply connected, not only with each other but also with the audience.

Pele means fire in Hawaiian; Pele is the goddess of volcanic creation. Juju means magic. The band's a high energy group, full of creative fire that gushes from under their skin and from deep within.

They were in complete unity and harmony. It was the best dance concert that I've been to since the early '70s.

These are musicians involved in personal, political and social change, and they're direct about it in their lyrics. They're full of practical spirituality and ecstatic about their work.

If you missed them at MPC, they'll be playing The Catalyst in Santa Cruz on Friday, April 2.

Young comic and friends satirize the rap music scene

By JOHN DETRO

THINGS MOVE fast on the streets. According to critics who cover the rap music scene, it already differentiates between Old School and New. It has its own elders, cutting edge cultural commandos, kiddie corps performers, nostalgia shows.

Another sign of rap/hip-hop's quick history is this satirical film about a young trio's smashing success and adjustments to real life. Any art form which makes room for self-satire first must know security as defined by the artists and marketplace.

Director Tamra Davis came to the project after building a reputation in rap videos for Tone-Loc, Young MC, Sonic Youth, Living Color, so on. It's not surprising that the greatest tension and entertainment value flow from sequences where actors Chris Rock, Allen Payne and Deezer D play out their onstage personas ("gangsta rappers" CB4 or Cell Block 4).

Nice kids

They're really middle class guys from a small town near L.A. Previous identities haven't worked during amateur nights at a local rap club. When the venue's owner goes to prison following a cocaine bust, Chris steals his name and becomes MC Gusto. Add prison garb, obscene and sociopathic lyrics, cell block stage sets, wild crowds — CB4 births itself and thrives.

But Rock — of Saturday Night Live — alienates his family and ladylove with those "gangsta" ways. Allen Payne turns into an Afrocentric firebrand like Malcolm X. And then the original Gusto busts out of the joint and comes looking for the rappers with termination on his mind.

Things work out for the best: the three main characters survive and learn a bit more about being decent selves. Gusto returns to the pen. Rock ends up owning the night spot — and his partners seem happy as clams.

Aside from the rap scenes and some inspired throwaway lines, a certain narrative flatness maintains. Writers Rock, Nelson George and Robert Locash know the satirical edge but can't stay there enough of the time.

Another Murphy

Charlie Murphy (Eddie's older brother) plays Gusto as a man so bad he crosses into burlesque. If the danger is unreal even within context (suspended disbelief), what keeps us viewers interested? The question goes unanswered by the script — and so a CB4 concert film would have been much more compelling.

But there are those fresh touches. A dancer brags that her left breast was displayed rather prominently in a rap video — a comment not far off from what's actually heard backstage. (Satire demands verity. The writers needed to be more truthful and not just further out.)

Righteous rappers (Ice T, Ice Cube, so on) comment in brief snips on the fictional CB4. Their comments are varied and funny and cogent.

Chris Elliott plays this geeky filmmaker (named A. White) who gushes over CB4's violent image and begs to document their days.

He shows the vampirism of weak people who "adore" and hover over strong subjects like hungry ghosts. Good job.

The conservative politician thinks that battling CB4's obscenity will be his ticket to higher office. And the man's pre-teen son has memorized CB4's videos — every move, every syllable — and runs after the group. That's how it happens: the young selling revolution's look and sound to the even younger.

Cherry Center opens dream-based exhibit

A SURVEY of dream-inspired, visionary and surreal work — Dreaming Art: Seeing the Unconscious — opens for a month-long exhibition on Saturday, April 3, at Carmel's Cherry Center.

The opening reception will occur from 2:30-4:30 that afternoon with all interested parties invited. Included here: a 3:30 dance performance by Yuko Miyazaki accompanied by Carl Littlefield Haycock on Shakuhachi (traditional Japanese flute).

Center Director Robert Reese says the all-media show "features the work of 55 Monterey Bay Area artists — enigmatic animal-like forms, recurring symbols and vibrant color creating an expressionistic circus of the imagination."

Participants in the exhibit, he continues, "were encouraged to appropriate images from their psyches, dreams, visions and intuition, then adapt them to the media of their choice. The result is a diverse mixture of disparate images, symbols, colors, forms — all unified by what Carl Jung called the archetypal depths."

Once open, the exhibit may be seen Monday-Friday from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. through April 23.

A reception and reading honoring the Dreaming Arts poetry winners will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday, April 24. Those winners will read from their original works, and cash prizes plus honorable mention certificates will be awarded.

Information: 624-7491.

JUST ABOUT two years ago, Pacific Grove Art Center had a non-jury show called The Subject Is...War.

Described as "a follow-up exhibit," Pestilence & Famine: Conceptual Art of an Unsound World will open Tuesday, April 6, with the reception scheduled from 7-10 p.m. on Saturday, April 10.

THE PHOTOGRAPHER and instructor William Giles will lecture with slides illustrating his work at 8 p.m. Wednesday, April 7, at the Barnyard Community Room in The Barnyard.

This evening is sponsored by Whole Life Center as the first session in a monthly series. Admission: $5.

The lectures, according to program notes, "will trace through photographs and words his quest toward ultimate seeing."

After wide travels, Giles attended the Rochester (New York) Institute of Technology and got his Master of Fine Arts degree from the University of Rochester. He founded the university's first photography department and taught there for 12 years.

His work is exhibited in museums and galleries throughout the world. Information: 659-5310 or 624-1803.

MONTEREY PENINSULA painter Richmond Woodson will have a show throughout April at Barbara Murphy's Portofino Coffee House in Pacific Grove.

"My recent paintings are figurative and executed primarily in black and white," Woodson says. "Devices such as tape and shadow are used to engage the viewer and establish a vicarious interplay."

for two years. I did Family Portrait, the first year, and the second year I did Wuthering Heights. Jack was head of service in Bakersfield, couldn't even leave the grounds. He did 10, 12 deliveries a day. They did half the deliveries in the county there. We were a good team in crisis, and we were in crisis constantly.

And from Bakersfield you moved . . .

Here. To Monterey. When he finished his residency, we came up the coast looking for the ideal place to settle. Being a native Californian, he wanted the beach, and I wanted mountains and trees. We came to Carmel because Marian Stebbins, the woman I had studied-under, suffered-under, learned-from at Mills, had retired here. She was living at the end of Junipero near the Mission. I had lunch with her, and by the end of the day Jack returned with office space, hospital privileges, and a part time job at Fort Ord. And we settled here, ga boom!

This was July, and I was expecting a baby in October.

Classical music roundup

Monterey String Quartet will offer a free public concert

CARMEL ART Association sponsors a free public musical program performed by Monterey String Quartet at 7 p.m. Sunday, April 4, at the CAA quarters on Dolores between Fifth and Sixth.

The musicians who'll play there: David Dally (violin), Patricia Boggs (violin), Carolyn Ramsey (viola), Margie Dally (cello).

Composers represented on that occasion include Albinoni, Schubert, Puccini. Refreshments will be served.

Information: 624-6176.

AT THIS writing, tickets still were available for the April 22 appearance of inspired pianist and funnyman Victor Borge at the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey.

That Thursday concert will start at 8 p.m. as a benefit for Monterey Bay Symphony. Call the Alliance Box Office (655-3200) to pursue ducats.

An octogenarian, Borge still does more than 100 performances worldwide every year. At NPS, the Danish star will pay homage to fellow Scandanavian Edvard Grieg on the composer's 150th birth anniversary.

Doors will open at 7 p.m. All four sections will feature open seating.

Critic Brendan Gill wrote of Borge: "I recommend him with all my heart."

And Douglas Watt: "Don't dare miss him. He's incomparable."

And Jacob Siskind: "Borge is such a cut-up, you don't expect him to play with that incredible sensitivity. The tone is pure gold."

The Stork Club by Iris Rainier Dart. Read by Sandra Burr. Bookcassette Brilliance Corporation, Grand Haven, Michigan. Unabridged book on four reversible cassettes. 12 hours listening time. $23.95.

The best-selling author of Beaches, Iris Rainier Dart of Pebble Beach, has this recent novel out on audio cassettes. The characters are a group of engaging '90s parents with special needs who meet regularly to confer with child psychologist Barbara Singer — a perfect theme for an audio book.

Having a child by adoption, or using a sperm bank donor or a surrogate mother makes for unusual problems which this group of parents, ranging from a movie director to a secretary, brings to the sympathetic Barbara. She gives some very sage advice, interestingly detailed.

The setting of Beverly Hills and Hollywood adds a touch of glitter. Narrator Burr has a pleasing voice and a wide range of accents and inflections which make for listening pleasure.

Devil's Juggler by Murray Smith. Read by David McCallum. Simon and Schuster Audio, New York. Abridged on two cassettes — three hours. $17.

So well thought of is Murray Smith's first espionage thriller that it is making its debut at the same time in hardcover and on audio cassettes.

The action starts in New York where a mysterious and lovely young girl dies of an overdose; then it moves to Dublin where the secret head of the IRA is blackmailed into delivering drugs instead of arms.

The next change of scene: Bogota. There, a ruthless drug lord is hunting down two British spy agents. Suspense mounts steadily as the lives of these men intertwine in a masterful story that's alive with action and intrigue.

David McCallum is superb, as usual, in handling the various accents.

The Divine Sarah by Arthur Gold and Robert Fizdale. Read by Penelope Dellaporta. Books on Tape, Inc., Newport Beach. Eleven 90-minute cassettes. Monthly rental $19.50.

Bernhardt (1844-1923) was the world's first international superstar with as large a following in England, the United States and Latin America as in her native France. She was as talented as she was beautiful and glamorous, and affected a life-style that was deemed by her enemies to be wildly hedonistic and extravagant.

What sets her apart from modern stars of stage and screen is that she was multi-talented, being an award-winning sculptor and an above average painter and writer. In this acclaimed biography, the authors display with sparkling details how her fascinating life reflected the brilliance and gaiety of the Paris of her time.

Narrator Dellaporta makes their words come alive.

And now some words from a CV poet....

CARMEL VALLEY poet Susan McBride says she lives there with two cats and her writing projects. Sample:

Heron

You are not alone.
There is the heron at noon,
white feathered treble clef
one note about to sound bamboo flute legs
unsteady
at the rough edge of a mock stone fountain.

And then....

Begonia

Born again
every blink of my eyes
this old begonia
hallelujahs dawn light, presses its burden of blood dark leaves toward our sun.

Much more praise
and I'll go blind.

DON'T FORGET that Carmel's Carl Cherry Foundation has reprinted the poetry chapbook Lobos. It was written by she who founded the local arts facility: the late Jeanne D'Orge. The local Seven Arts Press first published the poems in 1928. They're strong (D'Orge was an associate of William Carlos Williams, Marianne Moore, Wallace Stevens). Information: 624-7491.

Carmel Music Society's competition balloting questioned

By NATHALIE PLOTKIN

WHEN THE prize winners of the 17th Annual Carmel Music Society Competition were announced in Sunset Center Saturday afternoon, those of us who were present throughout the day were in varying stages of disbelief.

It wasn't that these three young people weren't accomplished musicians, because they were. They wouldn't have arrived at the finals otherwise, so one must count technical proficiency as a given. Therefore, one wonders how and based on what criteria the judges made their decisions. Do they work with a check list and does it allow for extra qualities?

I'm certain another set of judges could easily have made other choices. Also, I know that I, as well as others who stayed all the way, would have decided differently. But as they said, "The decision of the judges is final," and so be it. But I sure wanted to know how they got their results.

George Barati, who along with Barbara Day Turner and George Buckbee made up the judges, was kind enough to answer this question, saying that they all worked on a scale of 1 to 10 and considered overall performance as well as technical and musical coompetence. He mentioned such factors as phrasing, tone and rhythmic balance.

Got away?

So now we know — and I still don't agree. As I remarked last year, the best ones got away.

In the order of appearance, violist Si-Fei Cheng, a native of Taiwan, won the Third Prize of $500. Very skillfully accompanied by pianist Susanne Son, his performance of the Fantasy Pieces Op. 70 of Schumann was sensitive and feeling. His tone was refined and also spoke with confidence in the dramatic passages.

The Bach-Kodaly Chromatic Fantasy was played smoothly and with agility. He explored its harmonic ramblings and expressive musings with a fine command of the material.

The first movement of the Hindemith Sonata Op.25, No. 4 began with an impressive display of pianism by Ms. Son. The violist played his difficult part with strength and much rhythmic definition. There was much virtuoso team work from both performers.

Second prize

The Second Prize of $1000 was won by violinist Sae Shirigami of Japan. Pianist Dmitri Cogan, an artist in his own right, was her excellent accompanist.

Beginning with Ravel's Tzigane (the ultimate glorification of Hungarian gypsy music), Shiragami rose to its feats of violinistic derring-do with dazzling virtuosity. She projected great musical security and strength of tone. Her bow arm was equal to all demands and the pizzicato passages were masterful.

The orchestrally conceived piano part was brilliantly traversed and coordinated into an ensemble by Cogan. Shiragami's cool and fluid unaccompanied Bach selections were a fine contrast to the pyrotechnics of the Tzigane and her playing of the musically complex Schoenberg Fantasy was coherent and musically intellectual.

Again, Cogan was a superior collaborator.

The Grand Prize worth $3,000, which includes a recital appearance as part of the next season of the Carmel Music Society, was awarded to the German cellist Thorsten Encke who was ably accompanied by pianist Franziska Melcher.

In the Prologue movement of the Debussy Sonata in D, the cellist was technically secure but tonally thin. The Serenade with its many guitarlike pizzicato effects was skillfully managed with a good feeling for the style, and the Puckish Finale was full of life. The demanding piano part was very well done.

In the Liszt La Lugubre Gondola the declamatory, mournful and tragic mood paintings were expertly conveyed. The playing swelled to romantic heights in masterful style.

Dashing technique

The Finale of the Beethoven Cello Sonata in A, Op.69 was played with a bright, wiry tone and a dashing technique. Melcher was very adept with her flying legato scales. The mood was one of good humor and lighthearted caprice.

The encore was Apres Le Reve by Faure. Listening to the eight finalists was an exhilarating experience. There was much talent, hard work, dedication and discipline on display.

One can feel encouraged that the cause of music is being kept alive and will continue on in these capable young hands.

Desert Trippers gear up for the Spring Desert Trip

By JAMES GENONE

SPRING IS in the air, and yes, it's time once again for the CHS desert trip. In just two short weeks the portion of the student body that isn't going on the trip will stare in disbelief as this year's trippers smile happily and hug everyone they see. Insanity? Heat stroke? No, just seven days in the relaxed environment of the desert.

For over a decade, CHS biology teacher Richard Fletcher has been taking students from the high school to the desert over spring break. It gives them a chance, he says, to get away from the stresses of everyday life.

This year, with over a hundred students going on the trip, it's being split into two sections (one for underclassmen and one for upperclassmen). The underclassmen trip will travel down the coast to Santa Barbara and Anzo Borrego, while the other trip will hit Lone Pine and pass through Death Valley. Both trips will end up at Joshua Tree National Monument, where they will spend the last three or four days together.

What makes the desert trip so unique is the lack of stress surrounding it. No homework, no chores, no little brothers and sisters, just friends and the desert. The trip gives students a chance to relate to each other away from the peer pressure associated with school. Rules are kept to a minimum: only those dictated by safety and common sense apply. Other than that, the only requirement is having a good time, which most students have no problem fulfilling.

RICHARD FLETCHER, trip director, gets involved in last year's trip

The desert trip offers numerous activities for students. Mountain climbing, hiking, bouldering, dance, and Yoga were just a few of the pastimes on last year's trip. Aside from the activities, the sights are breathtaking. From the rolling dunes of Furnace Creek and the swaying palms of Anzo Borrego to the towering boulders of Joshua Tree, amazing natural structures are never in short supply.

In preparing for this year's trip, students do have some work to do. Along with preparing supplies and learning which snakes not to cuddle with, the group divides into smaller groups which are responsible for preparing meals. Each food group usually cooks a dinner and a breakfast or lunch. The group not only cooks the meals, but they also decide on a theme for their dinner. Some popular themes from last year include slave night, caveman night, and Hawaiian/Italian night. Imagine if you will: sixty youths, clad in make-shift hula skirts, speaking with horrible Italian accents. Not a pretty sight? Only if you're not taking part.

Yes, the desert trip may often border on he bizarre, but for those involved it's a lot of fun. It's not often in the life of a high school student to have a good time for seven days straight. That's probably why after coming back, most students have called it the best experience of their lives. This year probably won't be much different.

Rancho San Carlos Project Protested at C.H.S.

By FABIO PENA

Great controversy has been made about the Rancho San Carlos development project. While Pacific Union, the company that owns the place, claims that the project doesn't affect in any aspect the routine of the place, people who live there argue that it will bring serious consequences for their standard of life and for the native fauna of the place.

According Tom A. Gray, manager of Pacific Union, the project will "create a unique community Preserve which combines both sustainable resource preservation and sensitive development."

The company wants the construction of five hundred unit caps in a system of one unit for every forty acres in a area of twenty thousand acres.

On the other side of the controversy are the current inhabitants of the Rancho. They are protesting against the development, because they are afraid of the possible consequences of it.

Michele and Ambrose Pollock have live on the Ranch since 1986. They disagree with many points of the project, stating that traffic problems and lack of water would deteriorate their standard of life, obligating them to move somewhere else.

"My opinion is that Carmel and Monterey Peninsula is not in need of another golf course nor is it imperative that we have another hotel, especially when situated in the middle of the Carmel river watershed, "said Ambrose.

"Pacific Union Company understood and accepted the existing zoning on the Oppenheimer property (1 unit for 140 acres) when they purchased it, and now are having such a difficult time accepting the zoning limitations. Perhaps they should have considered the limitations prior to spending millions of dollars trying to convince the citizens and politicians in Monterey County that their hotel and golf course is the only viable option for that land," stated Michele Pollock.

In fact, the residents of the ranch, especially the more well informed ones, say that a golf course in the semi-arid climate of the place would use over 1,000,000 gallons of water per day during the summer months, diminishing the water supply of the Carmel Valley.

Tom Gray from Pacific Union, however, declared that "the planning commission's recommendation further states that no development can take place unless in-depth water studies are conducted."

About the traffic problems also blamed on the project, Gray added, "Traffic from Rancho San Carlos development cannot reduce the level of service below County standards on nearby road systems. The Ranch must set aside substantial road improvement funds and submit detailed plans to mitigate any identified traffic impacts."

Pacific Union has had a difficult time getting the project approved. In addition to the residents complaints that 5000 more car trips per day would be added to the current traffic on Carmel Valley Road (since Robison Canyon Road is insufficient), groups of ecologists declared that the flora and Fauna of the place would be injured with fertilizers and pesticides used on the golf course.

Pacific Union and Rancho's residents now are waiting for a Board of Supervisors decision about the zoning project on March 30th. For a while the issue has been volatile among the Padre parents and C.H.S. They have called for a debate on March 24th at Carmel High.

The controversy, however is just starting because that will be only a first court decision.

Lennie's Lingo

WITH THE new problems associated with the lack of parking spaces at Carmel High School, there has never been a greater time when a solution should be devised.

The A.S.B. has sought the help of a professional to alleviate this problem. The new parking solution presented and accepted by the school board is the best solution that has ever been presented here at Carmel High School.

The new parking solution is to add some twenty-five new spaces to the high school. These twenty spaces will be constructed where the upper grass field is. The project is expected to start and be finished during the upcoming spring break.

The money needed for this project will come from the $10 parking fee students pay to park on campus. The rest of the money will be covered by the school board.

There is only one small problem here folks. If there are any additional costs, the A.S. B. will have to pay for these. What are the additional costs? Well, these are costs that the estimated project design did not foresee.

The student body feels that it is better to be safe than sorry. So that is why the A.S.B. has devised some ways toraise this money to cover the additional costs.

Starting next week the A.S.B. will first ask for donations to be made to the cause. The next phase of the A.S.B plan will be to turn every freshman upside down and shake their pockets empty. This is estimated to raise about $2.56 a day, before taxes. The third phase is if you are parked illegally, they will sell your car. Since there are always a few illegally parked cars, they estimated this to be about $15,000 a day. The last phase would be to install pay toilets, pay pencil sharpeners, and pay drinking fountains.

In case you might have really thought that the second half of this article was true, guess what? Do you remember what today is? Today is April Fools day! Happy April Fools Day!

News Angle

GOOD EVENING, here's the news for April 1, 1993.

Well, Ross Perot is back in the news again. In his latest newspaper column he asks the American people to drive with their headlights on in order to protest the debt. It looks like Perot's biggest supporters are people who ride motorcycles, people at funerals, and people who drive at night. Another of his many complaints is that the U.S. has a bad habit of "building up a military and then smashing it." He's right, we did that to Iraq.

In Washington, The President is still working on cutbacks. If his military cutbacks keep up, instead of a military base looking for a few good men, there's going to be a few good men looking for a military base.

Boris "buy me a drink" Yeltsin is taking a lot of heat in Moscow for his reform policies, especially from the military (who's threatened to rebel). The Russian President should do what ours has. He should close the military bases before he presents his economic plans.

There's also a new drink in Russia called the Boris Yeltsin. They give you a shot of vodka then they kick you out.

Supreme Court Justice Byron White announced that he is retiring after 31 years. That means we'll be getting a new Justice. There's been a lot of on Clinton pressure for a woman candidate, mostly from Clarence Thomas. The President would have already nominated someone for the bench, but Hillary hasn't made up his mind yet.

On the East Coast last month, a man was convicted of twice robbing a store called Déjà Vu. He broke the same window both times and stole the same merchandise both times. He was caught because the same witness recognized him twice. Déjà vu!

That's the news. Goodnight.

Letters to the editor

Dear Editor:

I read your article Should Marijuana Be Legalized and felt compelled to write. I would like to tell you a story about the effects marijuana can have. It is my story and painful to tell, but if it will discourage anyone from experimenting, I will be happy to tell it.

My husband and I came from solid middle-class families. We were both intelligent, well-educated people. I always thought people who used marijuana or any other drugs were poor, uneducated, and from a lower class. I have learned otherwise.

In high school, my husband began smoking marijuana. This was almost 20 years ago. Being a composer, he felt marijuana was good for his creativity and it was safe. Gradually, other things also seemed safe to him. For instance: lying, stealing, cheating, seducing married women and ruining their families, molesting teenage girls, and doing whatever he pleased at any cost. This resulted in legal problems, loss of driving privileges, and the danger of going to prison for tax evasion. In other words, he lost all sense of right and wrong.

Being naive about the subject of drugs, I had no idea this was responsible for his ridiculous mood swings and fits of rage. In desperation, he told me he was addicted and could not stop. "No Problem," I thought. "We'll just go to a clinic and send him through rehabilitation, However, he could not stop and did not want to stop. I became a threat in his eyes because I could not tolerate his total loss of reason. I began having illnesses from the strain, but I was determined to help him. Finally, he began threatening to kill me and tried. I collapsed emotionally, and at last fled to another country for many years. Both our careers were destroyed and countless other people were hurt. Recently, I have returned to this country and the threats have begun again even though he's on the east coast. I cannot live in my own hometown because it isn't safe. There is always an element of fear in my life as well as my family's. All because of this safe and recreational drug.

Marijuana is not safe for the user (abuser) or anyone around that person. Its devastation is permanent. Please don't ruin your future - or our country's.

Alcoholics Find Support

By CHARLOTTE SKEY

IN TODAY'S society many people have serious drinking problems. Sure, some kids drink occasionally at a party or at home, but that doesn't make them alcoholics. An alcoholic is anyone who can no longer control their own life without turning to drinking as support, no matter what age the person is. Alcoholic's Anonymous (or AA) is " not for people who need help but for those who want help," As one member, Bill T. feels.

When asked about his drinking problem, Bill told about how he started drinking around the age of 18. " I was with a bunch of guys in the service and we went into town. All of them were drinking rum and coke. I was drinking a plain coke, they squeezed a lime in my drink to make it look like theirs, because they didn't want anyone to think I was a sissy. And then all I remember is waking up four hours later, after having been passed out because they had been putting rum into my coke and squeezing the lime in it to hide the taste."

"After 13 years of drinking I finally reached a point of mental, physical and spiritual bankruptcy. I felt alone even in a crowd."

"I heard about AA when I was in a bar. A guy was sloppy drunk and somebody said to me 'he (pointing to the guy) always goes to those AA meetings, but it doesn't seem to work because he always comes back here drunk.' I said 'what is AA?' and he explained it to me. Years later after I became sober and was helping in AA, I helped that guy from the bar become sober too."

Anyone can go to one of the meetings. In a meeting, people share their strengths, hopes, and experiences with everyone else, whether they are still drinking or have been sober for many years.

"It's not how much you drink or how often you drink, it's what it does to you when you do drink," Bill would often hear from people in his meetings, when he used to deny he had a drinking problem.

When Bill came into the program there were only a few treatment programs, but today there are other ways to stop drinking if you want. There are recovery centers, private counselors, and other ways.

The unofficial AA slogan is "If you want to drink that's your business, if you want to stop that's ours." For any information regarding AA or recovery centers contact the Central Office at 373-3713, or write to:

Two New Music Groups Make Splash At CHS

By ILISABETH DIANE PELLETT

HAVE YOU ever come to school on Thursday morning and heard a loud noise emerging from the area around the Library? Well that is the sound of the CHS Blues Band called Da Bluzz! The Blues Band practices every Thursday from 7:00 a.m. until school starts. They also practice on Wednesday during lunch in room 43. The Blues Band members are Vic Selby, Joe Sheedy, Rudy Ortega, Avner Biblarz, Joe Thomas, Sage Simon, Belinda Underwood, Brandon Roberts, and Ilisabeth Pellett. Blues Band also practices on Saturdays! The Blues Band will be performing at The Day on the Green, in the main quad at lunch, and also at the Spring Concert along with the other musical talents of CHS.

" I think that the Blues Band has the potential to be one of the best bands in the music department here at CHS," said James Findlay, a former band member.

John Ables, Track coach and #1 Blues fan, had a lot to say about the Blues Band. " I see Da Bluzz! working like an athletic team which excels. The best musicians are highly disciplined and work hard. Therefore they can't help but to be successful. Sacrifice of early mornings, lunches, weekends will ultimately pay off."

" If I was the manager of the Blues Band, I would make sure everyone would show up for rehearsals. I would get them lots of gigs like performing at other schools, at hospitals, convalescent homes, and at the Youth Center," continued Coach Ables.

Coach Ables likes to listen to the Blues because the songs bring back memories. " The songs that the Blues Band sings brings me back to high school! I know every song and words to the songs that they sing."

Have you also wondered what that piano music is that you hear during first period? That's the accompaniment for the CHS Choir under the direction of Betsey Walsh. Nelli Keel, Kelly Walsh, Mary Jane Barlocker, Angela Updyke, Rudy Ortega, Courtney Kauffman, Lindsay Webb, Wendy Sue Perkins, January Vandervort, Janise Barber, Matt Owens, Alexis Ford, Angel Calamia, Irene Castillo, Kristi Reimers and Ilisabeth Pellett make up the choir. They performed in a Christmas concert on KSBW Channel 8 along with other schools in the county. The Choir's next concerts will be the Spring Concert, and other events will follow.

These people have worked a long time to get to where they are in the music business. Either they have practiced a certain instrument or they have been doing something totally different. They need your support and would like to see as many of you at the concerts as possible. These people will be doing a lot of hard work, which relates to a hard time. The Seniors have much to do, like getting ready for graduation and getting on in the real world!

Many different people like to do different things and that is why we have the CHS Choir and also have the CHS Blues Band. Please show your spirit and support these two great groups.

THE WOMEN

By RUBISELL DOMINGUEZ

BEFORE I had started reading and tallying the polls from both classes (junior and senior) girls, I have to admit that I was somewhat expecting girls to look for sensitivity, smile, eyes, and spontaneity but it seems like looks are hot this season, with some exceptions.

Juniors results in what attracts them most in the opposite sex. ( Listed in order).

1. Smile, intelligence and spontaneity.
2. Eyes, hair, body and sensitivity.
3. Intelligence.
4. Body.
5. Smile.
6. Hair and body.

Seniors results in what attracts them most in the opposite sex. (Listed in order).

1. Eyes and sensitivity.
2. Smile and intelligence.
3. Eyes and spontaneity.
4. Sensitivity.
5. Body and smile.
6. Eyes, hair, smile, intelligence and sense of humor.
7. Spontaneity and hair.
8. Hands.

Only 31% out of twenty people surveyed have had a relationship longer than six months and most of them believe that monogamous relationships are safer.

"If you really like someone, then it's worth staying with them." "For the past three years I have been 'playing the field.' Now I'm ready for a monogamous relationship because I've dated all sorts of guys. Now I know what I want."

"Monogamous. I just don't think it's cool or fair for the people involved if they are seeing other people."

"I prefer monogamous relationships. It's way too dangerous to be otherwise. Then you have trust and security." It's always interesting to find out what people are looking for in relationships. The truth is that no-matter who you are, how old you are or what grade you're in, sometime in your life you're going to find yourself in a serious relationship, so why not start now guys, and take a hint on what CHS girls look for in a man?

The question that got the best responses was, "What's your definition of love."

"I think it's wanting to be with a person 24 hours a day."

"Love is an emotion that's mutual and it takes time to build up. Love at first sight is a blur. You have to learn to respect and talk to someone in order to love them."

"Understanding and caring about the person, accepting him or her for who they are. Not wanting to change them, being there. It's the feeling you have when you really like someone. You feel good. It's hard to describe, but you feel really awesome."

"Love shouldn't be defined. It is an emotion and a feeling one experiences, not defines it. But remember, don't think love and infatuation are the same , or even close."

LOVE IN THE 90'S

WHAT ATTRACTS the opposite sex, or what's "out on the market" so to speak? We put out a poll in mid March to find out what it is exactly that people are seeking for in their quest for love. The polls were given to ten senior guys and ten senior girls and ten junior guys and ten junior girls.

The questionnaire asked different sorts of questions that varied from "What attracts you most to the opposite sex" to "What's your definition of love." The people taking the poll had to rate from one to seven, one being the most and seven being the least. Eight was optional if they wanted to add other descriptions. They chose from :

1. Eyes
2. Hair
3. Body
4. Smile
5. Sensitivity
6. Intelligence
7. Spontaneity
8. Other

THE MEN

By JEFFRY McGEE

WHEN I put out the survey to the male side of the spectrum, I received a few immature responses, but I must say, the guys really came through. What taints the male populace is a sickness called reputation. This society has driven into males that it is appropriate, even commonplace to have a macho, insensitive attitude.

Guys are trying to fight this ridiculous stereotype that has been placed on them. Again, I was happily surprised at the response to the question "how would you like the opposite sex to view you." The amalgam of similar answers is that guys want the opposite sex to view them as caring and sensitive, but the male stereotype is just too prevalent in most person's minds.

80% of the male survey takers insisted that they were hurt much more than their partners, but again, kept the attitude. Women often think that the male "doesn't care what the hell happens to the girl, as long as he's happy." This is highly untrue. Males cling to this spurious macho attitude in order to protect themselves.

The question "what attracts you most about the opposite sex" created an obvious response: 85% of the males asked said that the female's body is the most arousing of the traits, but then again, not many (including females) are attracted to the sensitivity of the other person first. Looks are the focal point for first-sight attraction.

The majority of surveyed males agreed that "love" is a wonderful necessity to life, and is not to be taken for granted.

"It means talking."

"Love is when two people care for each other so much that they want the other person to be happy even if it means hurting themselves in the process."

"Love is when nothing about the loved one irritates you and you love every aspect of the person."

"Love is something that takes ahold of your consciousness to a point that no*thing* else matters. It's what gives life meaning."

How can the "machoman" stereotype be extinguished? Males are ready to love and be loved. It is obvious that males are ready to change, but they need some form of help by the ladies. Ladies: if you have one, grab your man and hold him tight. If you don't, there are plenty of good ones out there that are willing to have a loving relationship.
